Roosevelt Urges 100% Support of Chest Drives

Radio Talk Opens Mobilization for Human Needs; Sees No Relief Conflict

President Roosevelt last night called on the Nation to give the Community Chest drives this fall 100 per cent support.

His address, broadcast from the White House over the combined networks of the three major broadcasting companies, opened the 1939 Mobilization for Human Needs.

"I like the ringing challenge in that militant designation: Mobilization for Human Needs," he said. "It is a call for each and every one of us to enlist in the Nation-wide campaign to extend a helping hand to all who suffer privation or want within our borders."

The President emphasized there was no conflict between the mobilization, working through the community chests throughout the country, and the various forms of relief extended by the Federal and local governments.

No Conflict With Relief

Each has its own field of service, he declared. The problem of affording direct or community relief, he said, is the job of the community chest agencies.

Their task, he pointed out, is to deal with many problems of human misfortune, such as helping poor families through temporary crises, while the Federal Government attempts to take care only of certain needs. Work relief, he said, attacks the problem of providing jobs for able-bodied persons.

"One hundred per cent support of the community chest," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "will greatly diminish want and suffering in every community in the land."

The community chests, he said, are this country's "home front," and he remarked that "our home front must be defended at all hazards." In the midst of a world torn by war, he declared, the American people must remember that, no matter how broad their sympathies, "charity begins at home."

He stressed value of chest organizations in keeping families intact.

Meanwhile, plans went forward for the Community Chest drive here next month.

"Go-and-See" Tours Planned

Mrs. Wilson Lee, chairman of the Community Chest League's "keynote" luncheon, to be held next Monday in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, announced a series of "Go-and-See" tours to afford all interested persons first-hand information as to work of the Community Chest agencies.

The luncheon, she said, will signal the beginning of these tours, which will begin next Tuesday and continue through November 3.

Exhibits prepared by 35 of the 67 local Chest agencies will line the corridor of the hotel on the day of the luncheon.

Tours have been scheduled each day, except Saturday and Sunday, to three or four Chest agencies holding open house.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., chairman of the Community Chest League Motor Corps, announced tours may be arranged by groups of four or more through the courtesy of volunteer motor corps members who are donating services and automobiles. Groups wishing to arrange such tours are asked to call Community Chest headquarters, Metropolitan 2284.

Lewis Hints CIO May Turn Against NLRB

Labor Leader Hits Administration of Act at Convention

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 9.—John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, hinted tonight the Congress of Industrial Organizations may turn against the National Labor Relations Board, which it has defended repeatedly from attacks by employers and the A. F. of L.

The hint came in Lewis' presidential report to the second CIO national convention, in which he warned labor against "the illusion of prosperity brought by war," and in which he described unemployment as democracy's "number one problem."

Administration Questioned

Lewis sharply criticized recent administration of the Wagner act by the National Labor Relations Board, while reiterating the CIO's approval of the act.

"But," he said, "when the act is so administered as to thwart the development and maintenance of stable industrial relations, then it becomes necessary to consider and weigh carefully whether the benefits of the act outweigh the dangers which its administration inflicts upon organized labor."

Tracing recent decisions of the board, he commented: "In the face of the combined attack on the part of the A. F. L. Executive Council and the reactionary interests all over the country, the board has more than leaned over backwards in its administration of the law."

Cites Comparative Data

Lewis singled out, particularly, what he termed the board's "policy of deciding unit cases in favor of the A. F. L. craft claims," its calling for plant elections, as in the Chrysler decision, and "the increasing failure of the board to co-operate and consult with unions" in administration of the act and enforcement of decisions.

Lewis also attacked the Federal Government's "hesitant half steps

Peace Fund Solicitation Laid to Fish

Rep. Woodrum And New Yorker Clash in House, Trade Charges

A debate both warm and personal startled the House out of its lethargy yesterday when Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, accused Representative Fish, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, of conducting "a propaganda racket that makes Dr. Townsend and the utility outfit look like pikers."

Later, on objection by members, he withdrew the word "racket" and substituted "campaign."

Woodrum, one of the most influential members of the House, asserted that the National Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars, of which Fish is chairman, was the most "colossal propaganda undertaking" he had heard of in his 16 years in Congress.

In a 40-minute speech bristling with resentment the white-haired Virginian declared Fish had solicited funds for his committee on House stationery that went through the mails under Congressional frank.

"There is no excuse for any member of this House to ask for public contributions to make his views known to the American people," roared Woodrum.

War Hysteria Here, Says Fish

Fish, who listened silently to Woodrum's diatribe, told the House a few minutes after his adversary sat down that "we have come now into a war hysteria where everybody's motives are challenged—even those who fought in the World War by those who did not fight in the World War."

The lanky New Yorker, 21 years ago an officer in France, said that in the World War Woodrum was holding "a soft job somewhere down in Virginia" and "now tries to make me out by implication a traitor to my country."

Woodrum told the House that the stationery of Fish's committee bears the names of 38 Representatives and former Representatives, all but one a Republican. "In my very firm belief," said Woodrum, "they have little idea of what the committee does. The letterhead gives the number of Fish's suite in the New House Office Building as the committee's address.

One committee letter Woodrum read to the House asked for funds "to print and distribute literature with facts to offset false propaganda." Checks were to be made payable to Walter L. Reynolds, who Woodrum said was Fish's secretary.

"A New Departure"

"This," said Woodrum, "is a new departure in propaganda in America. It has marvelous possibilities. All you have to do is get a hobby, a good mailing list, and you do not have to go around the Hatch bill or through it; you can finance your campaign not out of the pockets of Government employes but out of the pockets of American suckers, if you can get enough of them to respond."

As the galleries began to fill up with intently listening crowds, Woodrum continued: "We have condemned the utilities; we have condemned Dr. Townsend—but at least they had to have offices downtown. At least, they did not set up their committee under the dome of the Capitol."

Woodrum declared "many Americans" will believe that members of Congress who do not belong to the committee "are engaged in a horrid

Dies to Call Six Workers At Navy Yard

Communist Leader Here Asks Murphy To Protect Rights

By John B. Oakes.

As the Dies Committee decided to serve subpenas today on six alleged Communists employed in the Navy Yard, Martin Chancey, District secretary of the Communist Party, appealed to Attorney General Murphy for protection from what he termed "lawless, terroristic and dishonest actions" of the committee and its agents.

In conjunction with the concentrated drive on supposedly Communistic activities in the Government departments, The Post learned last night that committee investigators yesterday examined Metropolitan Police Department files on "radical" activities in the District during the past seven years.

Police said that the files contain the names of 4,000 "Communists and other radicals," including some prominent individuals, who have taken part in meetings and demonstrations in the District. Transcriptions of speeches were also in the record.

The names of President and Mrs. Roosevelt were brought into testimony before the committee yesterday, when a witness indicated their approval of the American Youth Congress was used by Communists to further the Communist cause.

Meanwhile, Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, a member of the committee, announced that the "two new teacher locals" referred to in a report al-

Senate Rout Of U.S. Peace Move Seen

Offer to Mediate Without Bid Would Embarrass Roosevelt, Barkley Says

By Robert C. Albright

Administration leaders last night claimed more than enough votes to rout a virtual Senate invitation that the President mediate the European war.

Whether the President should intercede again for peace, they said, was a matter for him to decide, and not for the Senate to initiate. As reports persisted that "a big neutral nation" might move now for peace, Mr. Roosevelt was expected to state his position at a press conference today.

The peace mediation move was put forward by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, embargo repeal advocate, as the Senate agreed to vote today on an independent Republican effort to "split" the neutrality bill.

Johnson proposed that the Senate take three-day recesses, temporarily suspending neutrality debate, to give the President an opportunity to consider the possibility of peacefully settling European differences.

Vote Today On Tobey Motion

Senate Majority Leader Barkley immediately announced he would oppose the Johnson motion, and claimed the votes to defeat it. He declared it would be embarrassing to the President, who has not been asked by any belligerent to mediate their war. It is not up to the Senate to take the initiative, Barkley maintained, insisting that the chamber proceed with neutrality debate.

The first Senate test of strength on the neutrality bill will come at 2 p. m. today when a motion by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, to divide the bill into two parts will go to a vote.

Tobey seeks to send the measure back to committee in order that "title and carry" anti-war safeguards may be reported as a separate measure for immediate action. Under the Tobey motion, the arms embargo repeal provision would be held up until the other sections are disposed of.

"Pull Hitler's Chestnuts Out"

Opponents of repeal denied that the Tobey motion is a "true test" of Senate sentiment on the measure, indicating several of their members would vote against it to avoid that construction.

But neutrality bill managers, who claim a wide majority of Senate votes committed for repeal, declared the Tobey motion's expected defeat would bell-wether ultimate Senate passage of the bill and repeal of the arms embargo.

Senator Johnson's motion to recess the Senate to clear the way for peace overtures by the President is not debatable, and must be voted on whenever he formally presents it.

He indicated he may seek a vote late today, but first offered an op-

GERMANY LAUNCHED a vast program of repatriation of hundreds of thousands of people of German blood from the Baltic states and perhaps Eastern Europe countries.

WESTERN FRONT activity increased as Nazi patrols and artillery hammered the French lines, rousing expectation of a "big push."

SWEDEN POSTPONED demobilization of 100,000 reservists, and began digging air raid shelters as projected Finnish-Russian talks stirred anxiety of Scandinavian nations.

SOVIET RUSSIA began sending her troops into Estonia to man bases acquired in their recent treaty, and threw her support behind Germany's "peace offensive."

ITALY'S PRESS bitterly assailed Russia, and looked askance on Nazi repatriation moves—Page 6.

'18 Reich Vessels At Latvian and Estonian Ports To Speed Exodus

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—Having delivered the Baltic states to Imperial Bolshevism, whose advance guard of 21,000 Red troops and 400 tanks began marching into Estonia today, Germany sped steps to evacuate German minorities before the Red army arrived.

This evacuation, accompanied by a flight of wealthier native families from the same region, is in line with Fuehrer Hitler's Reichstag speech envisaging, in co-operation with Russia, a "new order of ethnographic relations that will bring a settlement of nationalities" and which has initiated one of the greatest migration movements of all times.

The speed with which the project was taken in hand was illustrated by the fact that the German ministers to Riga and Tallinn took up the matter with the respective governments Saturday, the day after Hitler's speech; that a special German mission arrived in Riga yesterday, and that 18 German ships are already at Riga, Tallinn and other harbors to take the first German refugees aboard.

Estonia, Latvia First

For the moment Evacuation efforts are concentrated in Estonia and Latvia, where the Bolshevist advance is most imminent, but depending on the speed and extent of the Russian penetration, evacuation from Lithuania, and perhaps other countries, is expected to follow.

There are 62,000 Germans in Latvia, most of them in Riga, and 15,000 in Estonia, and both governments are understood to have agreed to let them go if they wish, although they are citizens of the respective countries.

As regards Lithuania, it is expected that the 40,000 Germans living there will be exchanged for Lithuanians from East Prussia and the Suwalki district occupied by Germany.

Germans returning from the Baltics are to be settled in former Poland, where they will take the place of the Poles who are to be pushed eastward into whatever Polish rump state may be created.

First Migrants at Gdynia

The Germans leaving before the Russians advance into eastern Poland are the only ones to be admitted across the German lines and the Germans remaining there and in Soviet Russia are apparently to be exchanged for Ukrainians and White Russians left in the German share of Poland.

[The United Press said the first migrants were reported to have arrived at the conquered Polish Port of Gdynia from Estonia. The first shiploads from Latvia will start for Poland within 24 hours, it was said.—Editor's Note.]

In only one previous instance has Germany agreed to such an evacuation, namely in the South Tyrol, which was the price of Italian friendship.

(Italy has abandoned her plan to force German-speaking Italians born in the lower Tyrol to leave that district and make it 100 per cent Italian, according to an interview with Giuseppe Mastromattei, prefect of Bolzano, published today in Rome. The Germans there presumably already have gone, while the Austro-Italians who chose to migrate into Germany are being evacuated now.

(In effect, the measure which so stirred the world in June comes down to hardly more than the Stockholm, Oct. 9.—The first bomb-proof shelters in Sweden were under construction in Stockholm tonight and about 100,000 Swedish army reserves were ordered to remain in service as disquiet developed in northern Europe.

Heavy Guns Indicate Prelude to Offensive; Action Biggest of War

By Taylor Henry

Paris, Oct. 9.—The French high command reported tonight that the Germans were attacking all the way from the Moselle River to Saarbruecken on the most extensive front brought into simultaneous action since the war started five weeks ago.

Besides the fighting on the 35-mile front, the night communique said an artillery duel covered the entire northern flank of the Western Front, from the Moselle to Lauterbourg, where the French-German frontier joins the Rhine.

Shells screamed overhead as German patrols extended their contact with French advance guards from near the Luxemburg border to Saarbruecken, central key of Nazi defenses between the Moselle and the Rhine.

The German attacks obviously were increasing in strength day by day.

[The German war office late tonight summoned the classes of 1911 and 1912 to active service, International News Service said. The decision was taken after Berlin learned that Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain are scheduled to make speeches tomorrow and Wednesday, and was believed a

Cow Gets Right, At Law, to Stand And Stare at Car

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 9.—A third victory was scored by the animal kingdom over humankind today, when the right of a cow to "stand and stare," or wander onto the road at will, was established by the British Court of Appeals. A judgment by a lower court upholding a motorist whose car was involved in a collision with a cow was reversed.

The motorist, Harry Ludlam, complained that the cow had stepped off the grass bordering the road without giving him sufficient time to avoid it. The East Retford County Court judge had awarded him £18 and 8 shillings ($72) damages. The Appeals Court held today that the cow was in charge of a drover, and that negligence on the part of the droyer had not been proved.

Previous rulings this year by British courts made clear ponies and camels have a right to minor transgressions at least once in their lives.

Capital Area Hottest in U. S. At 90 Degrees, Oct. 9 Record

"We're having a heat wave . . . a tropical heat wave . . ."

The tune was Washington's unofficial theme song yesterday as southern breezes coaxed the temperature up to 90 degrees, a high for any recorded October 9 here.

Most of the United States was enjoying—or sweltering—in the abnormal October heat, but Washington and Baltimore perspired the most. Little relief was forecast for the Capital area before Thursday. Forecast for today is more warm weather and clear skies, with a similar situation foreseen tomorrow.

Outside of making fall-attired Washingtonians uncomfortably warm and increasing the number of iced drinks, the heat seemed to have little effect on District activities. The fire board reported it had sent engines to a smoky furnace but nary a brush fire. Harbor police said the river was deserted. Park police didn't notice any cherry blossoms or lilacs in bloom. Hospitals reported no prostrations.

The Weather Bureau traced the heat spell to air moving into the East and Midwest from the southern Mississippi Valley.

Louisiana Grand Juries Rebel Against Prosecutors in Probe

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Oct. 9.—Louisiana's months-long investigation of wholesale alleged corruption in political affairs erupted suddenly in rebellion of two parish grand juries today against their district attorneys.

The attempt by two members of the local grand jury to read a petition in open court making charges of misconduct and obstruction against District Attorney Charles A. Byrne caused a tumultuous scene, the arrest of the two jurors for an hour and their subsequent dismissal from the jury. Seven of 12 jurors signed the rejected petition.

Criminal District Judge George P. Platt, who rejected the petition, set tomorrow for an "open hearing" to determine the "truth or falsity" of the jurors' charges. The People's League called a mass meeting tomorrow to demand recall of Byrne and his staff.

The jurors' charges included allegations that the district attorney and his staff "failed and refused to co-operate" with the grand jury and "delayed, stalled and refused to produce" records.

"It's a lie," was Byrne's angry comment.

Meanwhile the East Baton Rouge Parish grand jury adjourned be-

High Court to Rule on Labor Union Disputes

Cases Involve A. F. L. Charges NRLB Has Favored C. I. O.

By the Associated Press

In its first business session of the new term the Supreme Court decided yesterday to adjudicate three controversies stemming from labor's factional struggle.

In each the American Federation of Labor has attacked rulings by the National Labor Relations Board favorable to the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

One involves the certification of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C.I.O.) as bargaining agent for longshoremen on the entire Pacific Coast. This question hinges for the present on a single technical point—whether the certification is reviewable by the courts. In two other cases the NLRB had appealed from A. F. L. victories in lower courts.

Yesterday's session was limited to announcement of which of approximately 300 cases filed during a four-month recess would be reviewed. The court merely said whether or not it would review a case, without giving the reasons for its decision.

Seven controversies submitted for action involved labor, and on three of these—in all of which lower courts upheld NLRB rulings—the court declined to act. Thus the lower court decisions were allowed to stand. In another case the tribunal agreed to review a case in which the board had been upheld. The board opposed review.

In contrast with the number of important Federal questions decided at the last term, relatively few cases of national interest, aside from those involving the labor act, have been placed before the high court thus far this year.

Important Cases

In the more far-reaching cases, the court took these actions:

Refused to review a Court of Claims decision dismissing an attack on the Federal capital stock tax. This tax was imposed by the national industrial recovery act and the 1934 and 1935 revenues acts.

Refused to act on a ruling by the Seventh Federal Circuit Court that the Federal income tax could be imposed upon the salary of Judge Oscar E. Bland of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Declined to review a decision of the Sixth Federal Circuit Court setting aside a Federal Trade Commission order that the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. cease selling tires to Sears, Roebuck & Co., at "discriminatory prices."

Refused to interfere with a Seventh Federal Circuit Court finding that stockholders of the defunct Central Republic Trust Co., Chicago, were liable on a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, of which $56,559,746 was unpaid when the suit was begun. The loan was made while Charles G. Dawes was chairman of the bank's board, and shortly after he left the position of R. F. C. chairman.

Refuses Milk Case

Refused to reconsider its June 5 decision upholding constitutionality of milk marketing regulations in the New York and Boston areas ordered by Secretary Wallace.

Granted the Government a review of a ruling by the Third Federal District Court which would permit Pierre S. du Pont to deduct $547,711 from his 1931 income tax return as necessary business expenses.

Refused to pass on a ruling by the Fifth Federal Circuit Court permitting the City of Texarkana, Tex., to build a power plant and distributing system with money from a PWA loan and grant.

Refused to review a decision sustaining a $33,950 deficiency Federal income tax assessment for 1933 against Mrs. Betty Rogers and the estate of her late husband, Will Rogers.

Refused Robert T. Jones, jr., the Atlanta golfer, a review of a decision denying him a refund of $53,-338 which he claimed was overpaid the Government as Federal income taxes for 1931 and 1933.

Roosevelt Asks Chest Help

The text of the President's address in behalf of the 1939 mobilization for human needs follows:

Chairman Taft, Community Chest Workers, Friends of Human Needs:

Tonight our appeal is to the compassionate heart of the American people.

As we look out upon a world, unhappily torn by war with all of its attendant horrors of death and destruction, we must remember, no matter how broad our sympathies, that charity begins at home. I like the ringing challenge in that militant designation, Mobilization for Human Needs. It is a call for each and every one of us to enlist in the Nation-wide campaign to extend a helping hand to all who suffer privation or want within our borders.

We must work, each of us in our own neighborhood, to support the local community chests:

Chests "Home Fronts"

The Community Chests, with their special responsibility to bring cheer and comfort to individuals and families made desolate by want and poverty, constitute, in a very special way, our home front—and our home front must be defended at all hazards. Let us, as we sit in our homes tonight, give thought to some of our less fortunate fellow Americans who live in homes less cheerful than ours, homes often on the border line of squalor, misery and privation. And let us not forget that it is just as important to keep the lamp of hope burning in our more humble homes as it is to maintain the elaborate establishments in which abundance and even luxury are the rule.

It is the survival of the old spirit of home that must be guaranteed. For the family still remains the basis of society as we know it, and must be preserved as an institution of democracy as we have always understood it is to be perpetuated. If we lose the home we are in grave risk of undermining all those other elements of stability and strength which contribute to the well-being of our national life.

Best of all, our work as good neighbors through our community chests does not overlap either Federal or local Government relief work. It is well always to keep in mind and to emphasize again and again that the proper function of the Community Chest is to extend local or community relief.

Distinct Service Field

Under the Federal security agency certain services have been organized for certain needs of the men, women and children of the United States. There is also provision for work relief through the Works Projects Administration, familiar to all as the WPA.

This is not the time nor the place to go into details concerning the function of these various Federal agencies. I have referred to them because we must bear in mind constantly that the mobilization for human needs, working through the various community chests in all parts of the country, has a separate and distinct field of service.

I desire, therefore, once more to reiterate that direct relief and work relief are separate and distinct means of attacking separate and distinct problems. Direct relief is aimed at many problems of human misfortune—in short, the adjustment of maladjusted families, the tiding over of temporary crises in family life. That is the mission of the Community Chest. On the other hand, work relief, as authorized by the Congress, attacks the problem of getting jobs for able-bodied persons who can give useful work in return for what they receive. It is aimed at the adjustment of maladjusted society.

Vital Sector to All

I am reiterating all this because to my mind we must let nothing obscure our vision of the field which is the natural sphere of the community chests. To repeat, the community chests are a vital sector in our home front. And I am sure the mobilization for human needs accepts the national policy of relief as outlined by the Congress while devoting all of its energies to the local problems which are its primary responsibility.

The challenge is to relieve individual distress no matter where it is found. One hundred per cent support of the Community Chest will greatly diminish want and suffering in every community in the land. To bring about that happy consummation, I appeal to the heart and soul, the conscience and every generous impulse of the American people.

conspiracy to carry this country into war."

Quoting Fish to the effect that President Roosevelt has already committed the United States to war, Woodrum—often an Administration opponent on spending policies—shouted that "a bigger falsehood was never sounded from a public rostrum."

Each a Peace Committee

"Every member of this House is a committee to keep us out of war," Woodrum declared.

The Virginian said that since Fish's committee "seems to be a semiofficial committee, as it uses Government employes and Government facilities" he had introduced a resolution providing for a House investigation of the books of the committee.

Woodrum had not finished his denunciation of the committee when several of its members, including Representatives Shafer, Woolcott (Republican), of Michigan; Case (Republican), of South Dakota, and Allen (Republican), of Illinois, rose to the defense.

Schafer said he approved the collection of funds "to keep out of war" more than "the $250 shakedown on autographed books of the President of the United States which the Democratic Party has peddled for the past three years."

Commenting on Woodrum's resolution, which was referred to the Rules Committee, Fish said it is "for publicity and the press—it's a dagger in the back."

He pointed out that committee chairmen have agreed to hold no hearings until the neutrality issue is settled.

Fish said that if the advocates of the arms embargo "did not gain 20 votes here today, then I'm no judge of such matters."

REA Chief Scores Washington State Power Company

Harry Slattery, new administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, last night accused a power company in Washington State of trying to scuttle REA projects in the vicinity of the Bonneville and Grand Coulee power plants.

In a letter to farmers seeking to carry out the projects, he urged they stick together.

Slattery, appointed two weeks ago, charged the Washington Water Power Co. with taking farmers from the REA projects. He denounced as untrue statements by the company that a $1,000,000 program of rural line construction recently announced by it did not conflict with REA plans.

War to End In Stalemate, Says Fr. Walsh

G. U. Regent Believes Combined Forces Can't Crush Nazis

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh regent of the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University, told the National Foreign Trade Association tonight the European conflict would end in a stalemate with neither side victorious, unless "some unforeseen element intervenes."

At an opening day session of the association's convention, he agreed with former President Hoover's contention that Germany cannot defeat England and France. "On the other hand," he said, candor compels me to agree with the German chancellor that the combined military forces of his present opponents cannot crush Germany."

"In that eventuality," he said, "the only victor will be the bolsheviks."

Father Walsh said the present debate in Congress "in truth, is not on neutrality but on the broad question of American foreign policy."

Hard Bargain Forecast

While expressing his "unqualified amazement at the repeated and unsubstantiated claim that an embargo on arms is contrary to international law," he said "possibly the time has come to drop pretext and involved legislative arguments for a frank show of sympathy for France and England."

Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble advised about 1,000 convention delegates that individual behavior of businessmen and the "magnitude and duration of the war" probably would determine "the extent to which our Govrenment can avoid" trade restrictions in wartime.

He warned businessmen who are looking for big orders from Europe that the warring nations are planning to drive hard bargains.

"We should be prepared for smart, shrewd buying by such nations," he said, adding:

"In general, it will probably be closely restricted to goods that are absolutely necessary to the economy of such belligerents and neutrals and limited to amounts for which they can afford to pay. There is a possibility that barter deals will become more common rather than less so."

It will become the task of American importers to buy the foreign goods needed here on an equally careful basis, he added.

Hindrances in Canada

Alex McD. McBain, sent here by the newly created Canadian Exchange Control Board, was greeted by a flurry of questions on how the new restrictions would affect Canadian subsidiaries of American firms.

McBain, while acknowledging American firms faced some hindrances in doing business in Canada, paraphrased Winston Churchill's recent reference to the United States in a London speech by saying "We believe we are entitled at least to your respect and your good will."

An appeal to Congress to protect America's "traditional right to the freedom of the seas" was made by James A. Farrell, chairman of the council and former president of the United States Steel Corporation.

Nations of the Western Hemisphere are determined "to resist economic encirclement by countries seeking to make them mere economic vassals," Farrell said, and have the power to combat effectively "all attempts to deprive them of their economic freedom and of their rights as neutrals."

Fred I. Kent, director of the Bankers Trust Co., said "the bickerings of governments" and "shells and bombs" will fail to break the friendship of international businessmen "who have learned to respect each other's integrity."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Treasury Plans Increased Sale Of 91-Day Bills

Undetermined Sum Of New Money To Be Borrowed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday the Treasury would borrow an undetermined amount of new money, beginning next week, by the weekly sale of an additional $50,-000,000 of 91-day discount bills.

Although sale of the new bills, he emphasized, would be on a week-to-week basis, indications are that the process will continue, if market action is considered satisfactory, for several weeks at least.

The reason for the borrowing, he said, is that the Treasury's working balance has dwindled about $500,-000,000 since July 1. The total, on October 6, was $1,409,817,540.

Wants Safe Working Balance

Morgenthau said he wanted to keep the working balance at a figure where, if it should become necessary to skip a financing date, this could be done safely so that the Treasury would be in no danger of running low on funds before the next financing date.

For more than a year the Treasury has had only $1,300,000,000 of the 91-day bills outstanding. The maturities are so arranged that $100,000,000 of the bills fall due each week.

Beginning next Monday, the Treasury will sell $150,000,000 of bills. Of this amount, $100,000,000 will be used to pay off the bills that fall due, leaving the Treasury with a $50,000,000 net addition to its cash.

$650,000,000 Maximum

Under this arrangement, the maximum amount that the Treasury could borrow, of course, would be $650,000,000. In other words, the 91-day bill cycle runs for 13 weeks, and if more than this amount were borrowed, it would be necessary to step up still more the amount borrowed each week.

Federal Reserve Board officials said the Treasury's action was the result of conversations with members of the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee, and was in thorough accord with the executive committee's views.

Due to unsettlement in the bond market following outbreak of the war, Morgenthau had to abandon plans for a financing operation on September 15 which would have entailed borrowing about $500,000,000 in new cash and refunding $526,000,-000 of notes coming due on December 15.

Morgenthau made clear the Treasury still intends to refund the $526,-000,000 note issue before December 15. This has been delayed because of market uncertainty due to Hitler's peace maneuvers.

U. S. Opens Court Battle in G. M. Anti-Trust Case

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 9 (AP).—In a trial that may last three months and hear nearly 500 witnesses, the Government opened today a courtroom battle to convict the General Motors Corporation and affiliated companies of violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in their sales finance methods.

Seventeen General Motors officials, including Chairman Alfred P. Sloan, jr., and President William S. Knudsen, are among the defendants, all of whom entered pleas of innocence before selection of a jury was started. If convicted, they can be fined a maximum of $5,000 and sentenced to prison for a year.

A jury of farmers and small businessmen was completed late today.

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corporation signed consent decrees last November agreeing to cease the practices charged against them in return for suspension of the prosecution, but General Motors chose to fight the case.

Oil Spokesman Attacks Connally Law, Regulation

By the Associated Press

A representative of independent oil jobbers declared yesterday that State proration laws aimed at conserving oil supplies tended to "control prices."

Paul E. Hadlick, secretary of the National Oil Marketers Association, also told the National Economic Committee that the Connally oil act should be repealed as an aid to independent jobbers.

He appealed for enactment of legislation to divorce oil marketing and pipe lines from production and refining.

"The one thing that has saved the independent oil jobber from going out of business," he declared, "is failure of all the States to have proration laws." He asserted there was a need for preservation of oil, but "not for proration."

U. S. Plans New Training for National Guard

Winter Maneuvers Likely for 250,000 Including Reserves

By John G. Norris.

Plans for an unprecedented expansion of training for more than 250,000 National Guardsmen and Reservists this winter, paralleling the new mass maneuvers ordered Saturday for the Regular Army, were revealed yesterday at the War Department.

Secretary of War Woodring said that while details are not yet completed, the plan calls for the following:

Two drill nights a week for the National Guard instead of one, to enable the 45,000 men being added to Guard units to be taught the essentials of military drill more quickly.

Week-end field exercises once a month for all Guard units in as large concentrations as is practicable, the men remaining in the field overnight.

National Guard and Reserve officers, above the rank of captain, to be rotated in command of Regular Army troops during the mass winter war games to be held in the South, being flown to the maneuver area in military planes in many cases.

Men to Be Paid

The additional armory drills and over-night field exercises may get under way next month. Officers and men will be paid for the night drills, and fed at Government expense during the field exercises. Officials said that funds for the expanded program will be obtained by using money appropriated for later in the year, with Congress supplying additional funds in January.

Meanwhile, the Navy announced that its recruiting program—under which 29,000 men are being added—was moving at a rapid rate. A total of 1,405 men were enlisted last week, nearly twice that of the week before. The number of former servicemen taken in—244—was below that of the previous 7 days—298, but first enlistments totaled 1,161, as compared with 447 before.

One difficulty arising in connection with the extra weekly Guard armory drill lies in a legal limitation against more than 60 per year, officials said. Funds have been appropriated for 48 this year. Therefore, if semiweekly drills are to continue all year, a change in the law, as well as additional money, is required.

Week-End Drill Plan

The plan for wek-end drills, Woodring said, calls for Guard units to report Saturday noon, be carried to military reservations in trucks, and stay in the field until Sunday night or Monday morning.

The District of Columbia Guard would probably go out together, with State units being broken up into smaller groups. In most cases, it should be possible to hold such training all winter, officials stated. The men will be housed in tents when the weather permits, and in other cases possibly be quartered in barracks vacated by Regular Army troops moving South.

Tammany Retains Roosevelt Foe As Its Leader

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Representative Sullivan, long an opponent of the local Roosevelt wing of the Democratic Party, tonight was re-elected leader of Tammany Hall by its executive committee.

Under his administration the Hall in 1937 had suffered the most disastrous defeat in its long career—re-election of the Fusionist Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and election of a Republican district attorney of Manhattan, Thomas E. Dewey.

Ten new district leaders were chosen.

Among them were Representative Fay, whose 1938 Democratic primary defeat of former Representative O'Connor was the only White House "purge" victory, and Arthur J. W. Hilly, successor to James J. Hines, who is under sentence for conspiracy in the policy racket.

Fr. Sweeney Made Provincial of Society of Jesus

The Very Rev. James P. Sweeney, S. J., of Washington, has been appointed provincial of the Maryland-New York province of the Society of Jesus, succeeding the Very Rev. Joseph A. Murphy, S. J.

Announcement of the appointwas received yesterday at Georgetown University, where Father Sweeney has been stationed since October, 1937, when he was named vice provincial in charge of schools and colleges in the southern jurisdiction of the province. Ill health was the reason for Father Murphy relinquishing his duties.

In Father Sweeney's service here the Rev. F. X. Byrnes, S. J., had been his assistant. Father Byrnes has now been made acting vice provincial in his place, it was learned.

Mother Fights to Spare Baby Blood Test to Fix Paternity

Mrs. Mary E. Beach With Her Child

Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 18, of 1048 Bladensburg road northeast, applied to the Court of Appeals yesterday for a special appeal to save her 2-month-old baby from the risk of being branded illegitimate by a blood test which her lawyer claims is not accurate or reliable.

Justice Adkins of the District Court last week ordered Mrs. Beach and the baby to submit to the test, which was sought by Attorney John Paul Jones to support the husband's claim that he is not the child's father. The husband, James E. Beach, 21, mechanic, of 905 F street northeast, answered his wife's maintenance suit with charges of misconduct.

Mrs. Beach's attorney, John T. Bonner, warned the high court that if the order were allowed to stand the courts might be "flooded with husbands willing and eager to gamble on a laboratory mistake that may rid them of unwanted wives and children."

Might Deny Paternity

Depicting such husbands as telling their wives, "if you attempt to sue me for support, I will deny paternity of our child," the petition continued:

"Having with heroic courage taken immortality by the hand and gone down into the valley of the shadow of death that her child may be born, would it be supposed that she would for a minute consider redress in the courts? A mother will starve that her child may be fed; she will wear rags that her child may be clothed; she will even die that her child may have life and there is no torture that she would not suffer before she would risk having her child publicly proclaimed, by the father, to be illegitimate."

The petition declared the District Court had no right to order mother or child to submit to a blood test and arraigned the test as against public policy.

Points to Disgraced Child

"It is better that a thousand men support children not their own," said Bonner, "than to have the life of one innocent infant harassed and disgraced, because the father of that child, with selfish disregard for the welfare of any one except himself, seeks to evade the responsibility that attaches to fatherhood."

The blood test, the petition pointed out, works only in the negative, giving the experts grounds for saying that a certain man was not the father of a certain child. However, the test supplies no proof that the man tested is the father, if such is the case.

"If a mistake is made," Bonner argued, "the result may show that a person could not be the father when, as a matter of fact, he actually is. By demanding a laboratory test a man can lose nothing, but he may, by a laboratory mistake, be relieved of the wife and child whom he proposes to abandon."

Milk Group Denied D. C. Tax Refund

Jo Morgan Decides Maryland-Virginia Producers Owe More

An appeal for refund of $14,877.88 in business privilege and intangible personal property taxes backfired on the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday when Jo V. Morgan, the District's one-man board of tax appeals, denied a major portion of the request and decided the organization owed an additional $15,352.15 in business privilege levies.

Contending it was a nonresident organization, incorporated in Maryland, the association petitioned for a refund of $14,059.17 in personal property taxes and $818.71 in business privilege taxes assessed by the District in 1936-37-38. The group said its bank accounts and stock and bond deposits were outside the District and were not subject to taxation.

Morgan, however, held the association was "commercially domiciled" in Washington, maintained offices and transacted business here and should pay taxes. He allowed a refund of $2,534.22 which he said was "erroneously" levied against certain nontaxable items, such as Government bonds.

At the same time, Morgan discovered the original business privilege levy was assessed on only a portion of the association's business. He estimated the business at $4,000,000 and said the Maryland-Virginia milk producers still owed $15,352.15.

In denying the refund, Morgan said that although the association moved its headquarters from the District in 1938, it was a Washington organization in 1936 and 1937.

Flier Ingalls Says Leaflets Aren't 'Objects'

Tells CAA She Didn't Know of Rule Against Flying Over White House

Laura Ingalls, woman flier who last week cruised over the White House and sprinkled downtown Washington with peace pamphlets, yesterday repeated at a Civil Aeronautics Authority hearing that she was unaware flying over the Executive Mansion was prohibited.

Under questioning by Examiner Roscoe F. Walter, Miss Ingalls said further she thought pamphlets were not "objects" in the meaning of Civil Air regulations which forbid dropping anything from a plane.

While attorneys wrangled over the admission of evidence, Miss Ingalls explained she was using a temporary license until she could return to her home in St. Louis, Mo., to have her regular permit renewed.

Although her license required her to be familiar with the Civil Air regulations, Miss Ingalls said she had seen "planes flying near the White House and did not know of the restricted area's existence."

Miss Cathrine Curtis, general chairman of the Women's National Committee to Keep Us Out of War, told the hearing Miss Ingalls made the 20-minute flight over the Capital at her own expense, and said her organization regretted "unpleasant circumsfances" had arisen.

Miss Ingalls was represented by Attorney Arthur Hatch and Lambert S. O'Malley appeared for the Authority. The CAA will announce its decision later.

Steelmen's Strike Here Ends in Raise

Contractors Agree To Wage Increase in 8-Hour Walk-out

Peace visited Washington's building labor front last night with settlement of an eight-hour strike by 150 steel workers and reports of an agreement between truck drivers and engineers in their bitter jurisdictional dispute.

Members of the Reinforced Steel Workers Union, Local 231, who walked out yesterday after a breakdown of negotiations with contractors, will be back at work this morning with the prospect of wage increases up to $1 a day.

Increase Provided

Contractors agreed to increase the daily wage of journeymen workers from $12 to $12.50 on all new contracts between now and May 1, when the rate will rise to $13 on new jobs. The contract is in force until May 31, 1941.

The union, whose members set steel rods in concrete construction forms, tied up work on a dozen major projects in yesterday's brief strike.

Meanwhile, the conflict between teamster and engineer unions for jurisdiction over operators of concrete mixer trucks was believed to be nearing settlement in Cincinnati, where A. F. of L. executives are in convention.

Terms Set Forth

National officers of the engineer union, it is understood, have agreed to surrender the mixer truck drivers to the teamster union, providing all operators now at work are accepted as paid-up members in the teamster organization.

Officers of the teamsters' local last week stated their willingness to accept members of the engineer union on such a basis. The peace terms now require only the approval of national officers of the teamster union, according to the report received here.

Six Indicted in $500,000 Slots Tax Evasion

New Orleans, Oct. 9 (AP).—Income tax evasions exceeding a half million dollars in connection with slot machine operations in New Orleans were charged to six persons in an indictment returned today by the Federal grand jury.

Defendants were Frank Costello, New York, once described by police as New York's slot machine "king;" Philip Kastel, alias Harold Miller, of Stamford, Conn.; Dudley Geigerman, Harold Geigerman, alias Harold Miller; James Brocato, alias Jimmie Moran, and Jacob Altman, alias Jake Altman, all of New Orleans.

The Government asked that bonds of $75,000 each be posted by Kastel and Costello and that the four New Orleans men be required to furnish bonds of $25,000 each. Three had been arrested tonight.

Roosevelt Talks Over Smithsonian Anniversary Plan

Plans for celebration of the Smithsonian Institution's 100th anniversary on August 10, 1946, were discussed with President Roosevelt yesterday by Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the institution.

"The President," Dr. Abbot explained on leaving the White House, "is head of the institution establishment. I talked over several things with him, including plans for the celebration."

Although the celebration is seven years away, institution officials said they had started considering arrangements "in a contemplative way."

McNutt to Back Roosevelt if He Runs Again

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, shook hands tonight with several hundred businessmen in a reception arranged by Oscar R. Ewing, an attorney who is managing the McNutt Presidential campaign in the nearby Eastern States.

"If the President runs (for a third term)," McNutt said between handshakes, "I am not running. In that case I am for Roosevelt."

From a dais he answered questions put to him by guests. One asked:

"How long would it take to balance the national budget?"

"That presupposes," McNutt answered, "that it can be done. I have always lived within a balanced budget myself, and the budget in the State of Indiana was balanced while I was Governor."

Among those at the reception were W. Averill Harriman, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad; James A. Moffatt, Standard Oil executive; Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the Second Army Corps; Earl B. Schwulst, a banker; Frank L. Jones, vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society; Federal Judge John C. Knox and Col. John Reid Kilpatrick, chairman of the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

Col. M. F. Scanlon Ordered to Stay At London Post

Col. Martin F. Scanlon, twice commander of Bolling Field, D. C., and veteran air intelligence officer, yesterday was reassigned as American air attache to London.

Col. Scanlon

Assistant military attache and air attache to Great Britain since 1936, Col. Scanlon had been under orders to report at Mitchel Field, N. Y., but because of exceptional familiarity with European air forces his departure has been delayed and now is cancelled. He was an air attache in Rome from 1924 to 1927 and had prior service in London from 1929 to 1933.

Col. Scanlon became a pilot in 1916 and in the World War saw active service over the Western front. Later he was air service officer of the First and Fifth Army Corps.

Pay Reports Reach $55,000,000,000

Wages totaling $55,000,000,000 which have been paid to commercial and industrial workers since January, 1937, have been recorded by the Social Security Board, Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer announced yesterday.

Explaining the record of wages would determine old-age pensions, he admitted there were "some errors" in employers' wage reports in the first year but that "this situation has greatly improved, and we regard as almost negligible the number of wage items now reported inaccurately."

Farley to Open Meeting of Postmasters

39th Convention to Start Today With Address by Chief

Postmaster General Farley, who is known as "Jim" to all postmasters, will extend a greeting to 4,500 today as the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters gets under way.

Said by postal officials to constitute the largest convention ever held in Washington, with the exception of the Shriners, the postmasters milled about the Mayflower Hotel yesterday registering, examining exhibits and chatting.

Last night they were guests at an informal reception given by postal officials headed by William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, and Mrs. Howes and George W. Purcell, president of the association, and Mrs. Purcell.

Burke to Speak

Vincent C. Burke, Washington postmaster, will welcome the postmasters this morning.

Following the business session, the visitors will go on sightseeing tours to Mount Vernon, Arlington Cemetery and Lincoln Memorial. Capital Transit Co. officials said the largest aggregation of buses ever assembled in Washington will furnish the transportation.

President Roosevelt will address the postmasters from the south portico of the White House tomorrow. Mrs. Roosevelt will meet their wives at tea and at an "overflow" luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel.

Many of the postmasters, who have stamped hundreds of air-mail envelopes, will see the air-mail carriers first hand and be taken on brief flights. A special fleet of planes has been stationed in Washington.

Pick-Up Demonstration

A demonstration of the mail pick-up service now in operation in mountain sections of West Virginia and Pennsylvania will be staged on the Mall at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. An autogyro, after picking up a mail pouch from the roof of the Philadelphia postoffice, will make a landing on the Mall.

The banquet which will end the convention Thursday night will be too large for the main ballroom of the Mayflower and will spread over the hotel.

Two cities yesterday were making bids for the 1940 convention: Pittsburgh and Columbus. The latter advertised: "Come to Columbus in 1940, where Franklin D. Roosevelt opened his campaign in 1932."

Co-Worker of Edith Cavell Enrolls in Red Cross Here

Beatrice Barber, who worked with Nurse Edith Cavell during the World War, is enrolled in the Red Cross by Mrs. Chauncey Yandell Dodds, Roll Call worker

English Woman Says Nurse's Coolness and 'Heart of Gold' Covered Up Her Real Activities in Brussels

A now middle-aged English woman, Belgian by adoption, briefly visiting in America, enrolled in the Red Cross here yesterday while carrying in her memory the face of the World War nurse, Edith Cavell, "whose execution by the Germans petrified us all in Brussels then."

The woman, Miss Beatrice Barber, worked as a nurse with Miss Cavell in Brussels through 1914 and until early 1915, when she gave up the profession and had no inkling of Miss Cavell's activity in assisting wounded Allied soldiers to escape across neutral frontiers—the offense for which the world-famous execution was meted out.

Miss Barber yesterday said it was her opinion that few persons knew of Miss Cavell's activity. But of Miss Cavell, a great deal was remembered. She was described as a stoic character, one who never displayed an emotion. "But under this was a heart of gold," affirmed Miss Barber, whose own face reacted quickly enough on her memories.

Miss Cavell's friends, she said, knew of the arrest of the nurse on August 5, 1915, but of what was happening subsequently little or nothing was known. German headquarters was in Brussels and all public information ceased.

But a tiny secret newspaper was circulated and this carried wisps of information, a few lines following the execution.

And the execution, she said, "petrified the city. "It was conducted on October 12, 1915, in deep secrecy, on the outskirts of the city early in the morning. The Germans had nothing to say about it, keeping it as quiet as they could. It was witnessed by no one. No one at the time knew where it took place or when it was going to take place," she said.

Miss Barber went from England to Brussels to study nursing under Miss Cavell, but decided, at the end of the year, to abandon the profession. She remained in Brussels throughout the war and since has made her home there. The Germans during the occupation were all right "as long as you didn't do anything," she recalled.

Belgium has been entirely relieved of its war scars now, she said. "It is beautiful." And in a next breath she spoke of the possibilities of another invasion. "Everyone is alarmed," it was said. She enrolled in the Red Cross at the booth in the Keith's Theater lobby.

Red Cross Asks Aid for Polish War Refugees

Blankets, Sweaters, Medicine, Sought By Relief Agency

An appeal for warm underclothing, blankets, sweaters and medicines was made yesterday to American chapters by International Red Cross, it was announced here at American Red Cross headquarters.

Advices from International Red Cross revealed there are 85,000 interned Polish soldiers and 15,000 civilian refugees in Rumania, Lithuania, Latvia and Hungary who need aid. A $25,000 contribution by the American Red Cross has already been spent for necessities.

American Red Cross has received thus far $174,736 in contributions for Polish relief, including $1,000 from Washingtonians. Approximately $1,500 has been raised for other types of relief in the war zone. One gift was from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Headquarters here also disclosed the American Red Cross mission to study relief needs has arrived in Europe. The mission includes Ernest J. Swift, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, James T. Nicholson.

38,501 Signed Up In Roll Call Drive

With all but two divisions of volunteers ahead of their performances last year, Red Cross Roll Call workers have signed up 38,501 recruits through yesterday. General Chairman Edgar Morris said the total is 1,440 ahead of last year but that the campaign must exceed 1938 by 25,000 for the District Red Cross to maintain a full schedule next year.

Roll Call headquarters reported the following section chairmen have turned in the largest memberships to date: Jacob Sokol, area 1; F. S. Black, area 3; John R. Bovard, area 4; Frank Walters, area 5.

One hundred per cent enrollments were reported yesterday for the office of the Corporation Counsel; personnel, cadet training and trial board divisions of the Maritime Commission; Manhattan Auto & Radio Co.; S. & M. Stores.

Legal Services by Banks Held Not Unlawful Practice

District Court of Appeals Rules Tax, Trust and Estate Activities Are Legitimate Business; Bar Committee Loses Plea

Trust, tax and estate services performed by banks are legitimate business and not unlawful practice of law, the District Court of Appeals held in a 2-to-1 decision yesterday.

Justice Edgerton read the court's majority opinion, which rejected the plea of the District Bar Association's committee on Unauthorized Practice of Law that the American Security & Trust Co. be ordered to discontinue alleged poaching on the fields reserved by law to attorneys.

Justice Stephens gave a dissenting opinion, in which he said that the District Court ought to hear evidence and make further findings, because he felt there was a serious question as to whether banks and trust companies are not outside the law.

The bar committee criticized the practice of the banks of giving advice about wills and trust estates, preparing tax returns, drawing legal papers and performing other services.

Justice Edgerton said the court would assume corporations are forbidden to practice law, although no statute excludes them. However, he said, the services of the banks are similar to those supplied by business agents of various kinds, such as brokers, who are not regarded as invading the field of the lawyers.

Pointing out that real estate agents usually supply prospective customers with transportation, Justice Edgerton suggested that common carriers could hardly complain that this practcie infringed on their franchises, because the transportation was incidental to the agent's business.

In the same way, he said, "in giving legal information, the trust company is not carrying on an unauthorized business, but performing an incident in its authorized fiduciary business.

Italian Press Opens Bitter Attack on Reds

Balbo's Paper Hits Soviets as 'Buffoons' And as 'Bestial'

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 9.—A powerful attack on Russia was made in Gen. Italo Balbo's newspaper, the Corriere Padano of Ferrara, yesterday. The copies only reached Rome this morning, or else delivery was held up.

Considering that nothing is printed in the Italian newspapers without authorization, this article, which among other epithets calls the Soviets "tragic buffoons and models of gross bestiality," must be considered significant. The Italian press is not changing its tune just because the Germans have teamed up with the Russians.

The article takes the form of a criticism of a profile of Soviet War Commissar Voroshiloff, printed last week in a Rome publication.

"This sinister personage," writes the Corriere Padano, "who is well worthy of a clique of sanguinary criminals who have subjugated Russia and seem to aspire to subjugate the world, is presented in a picturesque and romantic form."

It cites a number of passages, making sarcastic comments about them and calling the article "incorrect Bolshvik propaganda." Thereupon the Corriere Padana gives its own picture of Voroshiloff, which is quite unflattering.

Chief Called "Gangster"

"If Lenin first, and Stalin afterwards set eyes on him, it was simply because they judged him an exceptional gangster," it says in part, and then concludes:

"For us, Voroshiloff and his equals, like all carrion of Bolshevik Russia, do not interest us a bit. If among themselves they exalt or destroy one another that is their affair. At worst there will be one less criminal going around the world. But that in Italy the legend about Voroshiloff should be swallowed and compared to the legend of Garibaldi, that frankly is not admissible.

"We are born anti-Communists and we intend to remain so. Not a grain of esteem nor an ounce of sympathy for the Bolsheviks."

Rome, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Italy's controlled press today regarded "with dismay" the repatriation of Germans from Latvia as marking the end of German influence in the Baltic and the opening of this territory to the Soviet Union.

"After seven centuries of battle against Slav influence," said Milan's Corriere Della Sera, "the German minorities which acted as sentinels of northeast Europe retreat, giving up their posts to Russians.

"The mass exodus of Germans from the Baltic is viewed with feelings of dismay. This is the west which retreats in the face of the union of the east—a union which continues slowly reaching all objectives without shots or ultimatums, without respecting the ties of recently signed treaties."

Paper Recites History

The Turin la Stampa recalled that "German domination gave in only after hard fighting to the victorious Russian advance of Peter the Great's armies, without, however, being completely eliminated."

"The Germans rightly gained the advantage of having molded the mentality of the Baltic people, having imposed an essentially European form of civilization," La Stampa continued.

"The exodus of the Germans indicates total German renunciation of any influence in the northern Baltic and the opening to Soviet Russia of territory which slowly is losing all its independence.

"It is a fact that the exodus of German minorities is another episode destined to increase the serious fears which certain groups of Estonians and Latvians live in."

Eyes Baltic Vote

The Turin Gazetta del Popolo asserts that "Baltic Germans will leave Latvia within two or three weeks if they vote for Germany—it seems that many will not vote for Germany."

The Fascist press admitted today that Hitler's peace proposals seem doomed to collapse unless the Fuehrer's "attitude changes radically."

London, Oct. 9.—For the second time in two weeks, German bombers roared out over the North Sea today and repeatedly attacked a squadron of British cruisers and destroyers patroling the northeastern areas of the North Sea. The Nazi bombers did no damage, according to an announcement by the British Admiralty tonight.

As the German raiders, appearing in waves, dropped high explosives wide of their marks, the warships peppered them with antiaircraft shells, which are believed to have downed at least two planes, although the Admiralty statement did not cover any enemy casualties.

The same communique also disclosed that British warships narrowly missed their first major engagement with part of the Nazi fleet southwest of Norway yesterday afternoon. A British patrol plane sighted the enemy naval squadron. British warships soon were speeding after the Nazis and attempted to engage them, but they escaped under cover of darkness.

Dispatches late tonight from Denmark indicated three German bombers were winged by the British warships.

From Esbjerg, a British news agency reported a German military plane had crashed in a forced landing on the Danish Island of Fanoe, near the Frisian Islands. One of the members of the crew of four was wounded. All will be interned.

Another landed on the shore between Esbjerg and Ringkobing. The crew of four set fire to the plane.

A third German plane landed tonight in Inraege Fjord, at Egersund, in Norway, according to word from Oslo. The report said the plane was heavily damaged, probably from gunfire, but that the crew of four was unhurt.

Newspaper correspondents at Bergen, Norway, reported that a raid on a British ship was seen near the Norwegian coast and that "cannonades" were heard.

Dodging German shells which burst all around them, four British planes carried out a daylight reconnaissance flight along the entire German frontier to the North Sea and brought back valuable pictures of what was going on behind the enemy lines, it was revealed in a communique tonight.

The planes were sent to investigate reports concerning evacuation of important German cities, recruit movements and concentration of aircraft, as well as intensive building of fortifications along the Luxemburg frontier. Flying in pairs, they are said to have brought back information "of the utmost value."

The ships took off from a British airfield behind the Maginot Line. The first two, taking a northern route, flew at a height of 6,000 feet, most of it in bad weather.

They passed the southern tip of Luxemburg and heard artillery firing below, according to the account. Near Coblentz, they were detected by German antiaircraft gunners who shot through the clouds at them.

Nazi Moves Photographed

But the German gunners could judge their range only by sound and the planes were not hit.

As the British aircraft neared Siegburg, farther north, another barrage of fire opened. This time, too, the R. A. F. ships, dodging from one cloud to another, escaped.

Keeping their course near the Belgian border the planes flew over Aix-la-Chappelle (Aachen). Soon, however, the weather made it impossible to see and, abandoning efforts to reconnoiter, the planes flew up to the North Sea coast of Germany and then across to a field in England where they were expected.

The second pair of planes leaving from the same air field had taken off before dawn and was well over Germany before the sun rose.

Better weather conditions prevailed and these planes were able to take all the photographs they were sent to gather, the communique states. The results of the flights are now being studied.

French Advise Peace to China, London Hears

Gen. Chiang Reported Told to Be Content With Terms Available

By the United Press

London, Oct. 9 (Passed by British Censor).—A reliable informant said tonight the Chinese government in Chungking recently received a "clear indication" from a responsible French source that it would be advisable for China to conclude peace with Japan.

The French were said to have told Gen. Chiang Kai-shek he should be content with the best terms he can obtain and that he should negotiate with the Japanese through former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-wei, who deserted the generalissimo some months ago and issued a statement urging peace at once.

Wang now is in Shanghai, where he reportedly is slated to head a new "Central Government for China" to be launched by the Japanese probably next month.

The informant would not state exactly how the French "indication" was communicated to Chiang, but it seemed probable that if a definite French peace move in the Far East has been made the British foreign office must have known about it in advance.

In this connection it was reported that the British Ambassador to China, Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, now is in Chungking.

Chinese said that the last time Chinese Ambassador Quo Tai-Chi, saw Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax he was told that British policy had not been changed.

They admitted, however, that Britain virtually has ceased all support for the Chinese nationalist currency (which was upheld for months by an Anglo-Chinese stabilization fund) and that negotiations which were going on before the European war started for extensive British credits to China have collapsed.

Hongkong, Oct. 9.—Eugene Chen, former foreign minister of China, today advocated an immediate Chinese declaration favoring the Allies in the European war, to forestall any secret British-Japanese agreement.

Capt. Bradley To Lead Squadron In Atlantic Patrol

The Navy yesterday ordered Capt. Willis W. Bradley, jr., holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism in the World War, to command a squadron of destroyers in the neutrality patrol.

Capt. Bradley

Capt. Bradley, one-time Governor of Guam, was instructed to fit out a squadron of a dozen destroyers of the Navy's laid-up fleet and command it on the Atlantic Coast patrol.

Capt. Bradley has served here on several occasions, and was a student at George Washington University before the World War. In the war, he served on the U. S. S. Pittsburgh, being awarded the Medal of Honor for rescuing a shipmate and putting out a fire in an ammunition chamber after several explosions had occurred, one of them blowing him out of the casemate. Among other medals, Capt. Bradley holds a citation from Pope Pius XI for services to the Catholic Church while Governor of Guam from 1929 to 1931.

Barkley Sees Rout of Senate Move for Mediation in War

portunity for those who favor or oppose the step to speak on it.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was the first to attack it on the floor. Thomas called it "a pseudo invitation for the President to interfere in warring Europe." He declared the President shouldn't be called on "to pull Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire."

Johnson said he hoped to see the motion passed "by a small majority."

"If the motion is adopted, I believe it would stop this war," said the Colorado Democrat. "Not only the President would take note of it, but so would Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier. I don't know how we could speak more effectively to belligerents. Knowing the President's views, I believe if he would consent to mediate we would be assured of a peace with honor."

Opposed by Three Groups

Johnson said his move is chiefly opposed by three groups—"those who fear it will put the President on the spot, those who are afraid it would inject us into Europe's mess and those who lack confidence in the President."

Except for Johnson, who has declared his support for embargo repeal, Senators first indicating their support of the mediation move were all opponents of repeal. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Senator Shipstead (Farmer Labor), of Minnesota, were expected to speak for it, while Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said he favored it.

But Majority Leader Barkley, who persuaded Johnson yesterday to temporarily withdraw the proposal said he would take the floor against the motion when it is again offered.

"We would be acting on a mere rumor from Berlin," said Barkley. "No belligerent actually has invited the President to mediate. This is a matter that is entirely for the President to decide, and is not for us to initiate. Certainly it has nothing to do with the neutrality bill we are now debating. This bill is permanent legislation, and we should proceed with it even if hostilities meanwhile cease altogether."

U. S. Not Approached

Barkley said he was not opposed to the President acting on his own initiative if he thought it possible to negotiate an "honorable peace."

Recent news dispatches from Berlin said Nazis would like to see the United States or some other neutral power mediate the war. But Secretary of State Hull said yesterday that this Government had not been approached by Germany, Britain or France on interceding for peace in Europe. He said he has not yet discussed with his associates any potential peace move by the United States.

Some Senate neutrality bill managers said frankly they feared the Johnson motion would be used by repeal opponents to delay action on the bill, which they had hoped to dispose of in the next fortnight.

As the fight entered its fifth day of Senate debate, Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, who spoke Friday, resumed the Senate floor and talked until 4 p. m. against repeal of the embargo. Barkley then engineered a unanimous consent agreement under which the Senate will vote "on or before 2 p. m." today on the Tobey recommittal motion. Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, a critic of the measure, next obtained recognition to oppose grants of discretionary powers to the President in the measure. Danaher will again hold the floor at noon today, yielding only for a two-hour division of time leading up to the vote on the Tobey motion.

Neutrality Board Proposed

Other developments:

Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, in a resolution proposed that a 13-man national neutrality commission be established to work with the President on foreign relations in the absence of Congress. Davis proposed a bipartisan commission, including four Senators, four Representatives, and the Secretaries of State, Commerce, War, Navy and Treasury departments.

Informal negotiations for modification of sharp shipping restrictions in the neutrality bill made marked headway, with prominent leaders of both repeal and anti-repeal forces supporting the move. The efforts, which later will crystalize in specific amendments, particularly seek broader wartime trading rights for American ships in the Pacific. A leader of the move, Chairman Bailey, of the Senate Commerce Committee, emphasize that he would do nothing that would expose American shipping to risks.

Continuing his opposition to the Administration bill, Senator Downey was persistently challenged by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who contested the Californian's assertion that America is virtually immune to attack.

Two-Way Doctrine

The California pension advocate contended that the Monroe doctrine should not keep Europe out of America, "but America out of Europe."

He said America should build up its air force to 25,000 planes, and the Navy be expanded if necessary to defend our coasts.

In proposing his motion to recess the Senate, while the President considers mediation, Senator Johnson, of Colorado, declared the present "is an auspicious time for peace."

"All America applauds the efforts for peace that the President made prior to the war," said Johnson. "It seems to be the general sentiment in the Senate that the time has come to renew those efforts. . . .

"According to press reports, one of the belligerents (Germany) has suggested that the President should act as a mediator." . . .

The Senate's Administration spokesman stressed that the press reports Johnson referred to traced to no official offer and pointed out that Hitler had specifically opposed the return of Poland. They took the view that the whole question was outside the Senate's sphere. The White House was officially silent, but the President may disclose his attitude at a press conference today.

N. Y. Clerics Ask Roosevelt to Try Mediation

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—The Liberal Ministers Club of New York late today adopted a resolution urging President Roosevelt to attempt to mediate the European war.

The club, composed of liberal ministers of New York and adjacent cities, adopted this resolution:

"The Liberal Ministers Club of New York begs the President to initiate mediation, in collaboration with other willing neutral nations, in the European war and to seek the constructive and peaceful collaboration of the United States of America in a general European settlement."

Two dozen ministers, including Dr. Minot Simon, John Haynes Holmes, Dr. John Lathrop and Dr. Charles Francis Potter debated phraseology of the resolution for an hour and a half.

Ship Underwriters Cut Pacific War Rates

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Marine underwriters today announced halving of war-risk rates on transpacific cargoes carried by neutral vessels other than those of the United States, and on belligerent ships.

The rate on transpacific cargoes to and from points east of Suez on other neutral vessels were dropped to 50 cents per $100 worth of cargo, the same as had prevailed for United States flag vessels. The new rate compares with $1 per $100 previously. Rates on belligerent vessels on the same voyages were reduced to $1 per $100, from $2 per $100.

Sub, Tankers Seen Off U. S.; Patrol Boosted

Neutrality Zone Fleet Increased by 28 Reserve Destroyers

By Arthur Hachten,
International News Service Staff Writer

Announcement was made by the White House that a non-American submarine and two foreign tankers were sighted Sunday off Florida. Later it was revealed that the Navy has commissioned 28 more of the 40 reserve destroyers ordered into service for the "neutrality patrol." Ten had been commissioned previously.

Strengthening of the Atlantic patrol was effected as the American liner Iroquois, with its 584 American passengers homeward-bound from the European theater of war, was nearing an unidentified port accompanied by four United States destroyers and a Coast Guard cutter.

The Iroquois, which Grand Admiral Raeder, of the German navy, had warned would be sunk by an enemy of Germany, was believed last night to have reached the vast cordon of American warships patrolling the Atlantic. Scheduled originally to arrive at New York tomorrow, the Iroquois may be taken to another American port, it was hinted.

Amid the flurry of other activity yesterday came a dispatch from Portland, Me., quoting Arthur Greenleaf, Maine commissioner of sea and shore fisheries, as saying he sighted a partially-submerged submarine Sunday 5 miles southeast of Portland.

Naval officials at Kittery, Me., said there were no American submarines in that vicinity.

Stephen T. Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, in making the announcement of discovery of the submarine and two tankers, explained he could not make public the national identity of each because to do so might be an unneutral act.

Announcement of the sighting of these vessels Sunday followed revelation that on Saturday a submarine had been observed by the naval patrol off Miami. The submarine sighted Sunday may have been the same one seen previously, it was suggested.

The White House revelations were in line with President Roosevelt's announcement recently that a foreign submarine had been seen off Alaska, and another one about 70 miles off the northern tip of Maine.

Announcement of the tankers gave rise to speculation over whether they were being used to refuel foreign submarines. Many rumors have been received in official quarters that "mother" ships for foreign submarines were operating off the Western Hemisphere.

Stockholm Builds Bomb Shelters

estimated by military observers that about 100,000 men would be affected. Swedish authorities estimated they could place 600,000 men in the field if necessary. The regular army strength before the European crisis was estimated at 60,000 men.

Practice Blackout

The air-raid shelters, 10 to 12 of them ordered by Stockholm civil authorities, were the first ever started in Sweden.

On the Swedish-Finnish frontier tonight the whole Torne Valley, an area of about 4,000 square miles, was blacked out in air-raid practice.

Reports from Haparanda, in northern Sweden, said Finnish aviation forces practiced bomb attacks and antiaircraft exercises all day on the Finnish side of the frontier.

The Swedish authorities followed suit in Haparanda and in scattered villages. The blackouts will continue until further notice, it was said.

Finns Seek Support

(Reports from Moscow Sunday night said Finland was seeking diplomatic aid of both Sweden and Germany to forestall any "excessive" demands from Russia. Sweden denied receiving such a request.

(Authorized Berlin sources said Finland's relations with Russia were solely "problems of neighborly relations which really do not concern Germany.")

Traveling by train, the Finnish party probably will not arrive before Wednesday morning. The Finns pointed out that they were going ahead in the meantime with their border fortifications. Finland last week called up additional reservists for "extraordinary service to strengthen the national neutrality."

Fight War Trade Threat

The trade delegates at Helsinki were seeking a way to circumvent war dangers to commerce in the Baltic and North Seas and to maintain trade as close as possible to the normal level.

Observers expected no early conclusions of the Russian-Finnish conversations, as was the case of Estonia and Latvia.

British Hint They're Ready To Consider U. S. Mediation

By Russell Anderson,
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Oct. 9.—Amid rumors in Parliamentary circles Britain might be hospitable to a truce proposal from a major neutral power like the United States, it was learned tonight France and the British dominions notified London they consider Adolf Hitler's peace offer unacceptable.

Comment in Parliament's lobbies pointed to the possibility Britain would be "most receptive" to an armistice suggestion if sponsored by an important neutral leader, although it was emphasized this does not necessarily mean the Allies would accept such a proposal.

It was reported in London, without substantiation, that President Roosevelt is making active contacts through American embassies throughout Europe.

Truce Moves Reported

There were unverified rumors in Paris that moves looking toward a possible temporary truce were secretly in progress.

After reaffirming in the House of Commons that Britain and France remain "in complete accord" on their common aim to obliterate the threat of Nazi aggression, Prime Minister Chamberlain formulated a statement on Anglo-French war objectives he is expected to deliver in Commons Wednesday.

With the French and Dominion attitudes toward Hitler's Reichstag speech of Friday in his possession, Chamberlain's forthcoming declaration is expected to constitute the definite Allied reply to the Fuehrer's proposals, but without ringing the final curtain down on all further prospects of peace negotiations.

Pending Chamberlain's statement, British officialdom sidestepped all requests for a more specific definition of the Allied war aims.

London's diplomatic quarters generally believed Britain and France will avoid joining the issue of peace or war squarely with Hitler, for the time being. The Allies were believed to be awaiting eventual clarification of Soviet Russia's attitude.

Proposals Held Too Vague

The French and Dominion governments were said to have advised London they considered Hitler's peace proposals too vague and obscure to merit anything but rejection. They did not, however, bar the road to a counter-statement of the Allies' minimum peace conditions, rather than a flat rejection.

In his reaffirmation of Anglo-French solidarity, Chamberlain told Commons:

"His Majesty's government and the government of France are in complete accord as to the purposes for which they entered the war.

Unodubtedly as time passes both governments will consider whether their war aims shall be stated in a more specific form."

The prime minister's statement was made in reply to a question by Laborite Arthur Henderson "whether it is the policy of His Majesty's government to publish in due course jointly with the French government a specific statement of war aims based on the principles already enunciated by His Majesty's government."

Finns Speed Reserves to Soviet Border

Schools Taken Over By Troops; Papers Firm on Neutrality

Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Oct. 9.—While former Premier Juho K. Paasikivi, Finnish delegate, is en route to Moscow tonight in response to the Kremlin's invitation, Finland continued to call her reservists to the colors. Many schools in the Viborg area nearest the Soviet frontier were reported taken over by troops.

It was emphasized in Finnish political circles that this is purely a precautionary measure. It is hoped the Moscow talks will result in a friendly agreement.

The Soviet requirements are unknown, but comfort is derived from the interest that must necessarily be taken in the outcome by neighboring states. The entire Finnish press published today a Swedish newspaper's statement to the effect that the "danger to Finland is a threat to the entire north."

Newspapers stress Finland's determination to maintain her neutrality, saying it is the only way by which small states can preserve their independence.

Helsinki, Oct. 9 (AP).—Grim-faced citizens thronged Helsinki's railway station tonight to say farewell to the Finnish delegation, Moscow-bound for "economic and political negotiations."

When Dr. J. K. Paasikivi, who heads the delegation, appeared on the platform, the crowd, with bared heads, began to sing.

Women with trembling lips clung to the arms of husbands, brothers, fathers and sons as the words of the Finnish patriotic hymn resounded under the high roof of the station.

Germans Attack On 35-Mile Front

warning that Germany is ready to wage a protracted war if the Allies fail to respond favorably to Hitler's peace proposals.—Editor's note.]

French official reports of the last few days have told of repulsing German patrols in surprise attacks against various sectors.

Tonight the communique said there was "very great activity of enemy patrols between the Moselle and the Saar."

The Germans were believed by observers to be throwing larger and larger units into the fighting.

Military observers reported 24 hours ago the German were using units as large as companies, supported by machine-gun and anti-tank units, for their advance patrol work.

French observers considered it too early to say whether a long-expected German offensive was yet under way, but the communique left little doubt that one of the heaviest actions of the war to date was in progress.

French and British scouting planes were endeavoring to verify reports of German troop dispositions in order to determine the significance of the increasing German activity.

Changed tactics of German artillery caused some French observers to believe a limited German offensive might be starting. German batteries for the first time began trying to silence French artillery just behind the front lines.

This counterbattery work in the World War came to be expected as the preliminary to an attack.

Until now German artillery has been firing in front of its lines to prevent French advances, or training its fire on French communication lines and concentration points in the rear.

It was pointed out by military observers that a German offensive probably would have to be undertaken within the next three weeks, otherwise the weather is likely to turn bad.

Such an offensive, they said, probably would be limited to objectives which the Germans would have a chance of taking quickly.

On the political front, Premier Daladier prepared to broadcast a reply tomorrow to Adolf Hitler's peace speech. Political circles expected the address would emphasize France's refusal to discuss any terms which involve recognition of Poland's partition.

(Hitler in his "final" peace offer Friday said, "Poland of the Versailles Treaty will never rise again.")

Daladier will speak at 8 p. m. (2 p. m., E. S. T.) tomorrow night over a Nation-wide hook-up.

The French meanwhile disclosed the Germans had "bombarded" their lines on the Western Front with selected sections of Hitler's speech.

The Germans mixed words with bullets, the French said, by following up their verbal bombardment through loudspeakers with a series of localized infantry attacks.

The French premier's office announced his decision to take to the air waves in Europe's battle of words shortly after he conferred with Generalissimo Gamelin.

Loudspeakers made their first appearance Sunday as a frontline weapon in the European war.

The Germans used the same technique perfected in the Spanish civil war in which almost daily broadcasts from opposing lines became commonplace.

French advance outposts reported the broadcasts concentrated on portions of Hitler's Reichstag speech which stressed friendship for France.

"The Germans erected loudspeakers alongside machine-guns and antitank cannon," French reports asserted.

Heavy German guns which had been shelling French positions stopped firing when the broadcasts in German and French began.

The loudspeakers were so powerful the French reported they could be heard far behind the firing line.

A District Career Man

The District Commissioners could scarcely have made a more admirable appointment than that involved in the elevation of Edward A. Dent to the office of tax assessor. Mr. Dent is a career service man in the District government. For 27 years he has been preparing himself for the assignment which he has now been given. As District surveyor, he acquired an especially keen insight into the problems of property valuation as well as experience in executive management.

It is very important to the District to have this office filled by a capable and experienced man. It is even more important that the Commissioners are disposed to recognize talent and devoted service within the municipal organization when higher posts become vacant. Of course, this is only one of various instances in which this policy has been followed. If these precedents for the advancement of alert and capable men already in the District service evolve into a fixed rule, Washington will have something approaching a career service of its own.

Meanwhile there are encouraging indications that Senator King intends to give new life to the movement for enactment of a civil service law for the District. The disposition of the Commissioners to make appointments on the basis of merit and experience will strengthen the hand of those legislators trying to protect the local government against "the dumping" of political job-seekers diverted from the Federal service by the Hatch act.

Senator Borah Objects

Senator Borah's belated qualms over the drastic curtailment of American shipping proposed in the Pittman neutrality bill would have been more impressive if he had not agreed last week to accept this section. Only two days prior to the Senator's statement regarding the rigors of the cash-and-carry plan, the group of isolationists which he heads had offered unqualified support of this feature of the bill in return for retention of the arms embargo.

Since that position was taken, however, a number of Senators have learned a good deal about the disruption the Pittman bill would impose upon the American merchant marine. Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission is reported to have furnished them with a very thought-provoking estimate of the trade that will be lost to American ships if the bill becomes law. It is astonishing that the Foreign Relations Committee did not trouble to obtain this information before the bill was voted out.

The neglect of the committee makes it all the more important that Admiral Land's data be brought into the debate on the Senate floor. The mere fact that the Senate's most formidable isolationist leader believes the so-called "carry" provision to be unnecessarily severe should bring a searching review of that section.

Congress ought to consider how far it is willing to go in withdrawing American ships from the seas to avoid hostile attacks. If that policy is followed to its logical conclusion, it will result in complete ruin of our merchant fleet. In the long run, the national interest might be more effectively served by allowing trade to continue under the rules of international law, even with belligerent countries, and by insisting upon respect for our neutral rights from all governments.

In no event, however, should American shipping be restricted where there is no danger that it may involve the United States in war. As Senator Borah notes, there is not one chance in a thousand that vessels plying between this country and Australia and India would endanger our peace. On the other hand, he says, it will cost a good deal of money and trouble to forbid such transportation service in the Pacific.

The concern of Mr. Borah over this feature of the bill readily explains the failure of Senator Tobey to obtain any substantial support for his move to divide the bill and bring about immediate enactment of all except the embargo repeal. That procedure, as The Post has already emphasized, would be just the reverse of a well-ordered course.

With a large majority of Senators lined up for repeal of the embargo, that issue should be readily disposed of. But even such anti-repealists as Senator Borah now see the need for careful examination of other complicated questions which the bill raises.

Definition of War Aims

The Russian government, through the columns of the newspaper Izvestia, defines as "criminal silliness" the argument that the war must be prolonged until "Hitlerism" is crushed. "One may respect or hate Hitlerism or any other system of political opinions," says Stalin's organ, but "it is impossible to exterminate any idea or any opinion by fire and sword."

The Communists ought to know, for certainly no fanatical sect in history has ever labored more diligently to silence, by terrorization or execution, all who disagree with their peculiar formula for salvation. And while there is a surplus of irony in Izvestia's support of Nazi ideology it is comic only because it comes from the Communists. So far as logic goes, there is much substance in the contention that war cannot be waged successfully against an idea, whether that idea be good or evil.

It is important to remember, however, that Great Britain and France did not declare war on Hitlerism as an idea, and are not now waging war against Hitlerism as such. The Fuehrer's political philosophy was fairly well understood outside of Germany when he assumed power, nearly six years ago. But neither then nor later was there any attempt to fight the Nazis because of their opinions alone. And this remained true in spite of the ardent Communist effort to build a "popular front" against Nazi ideology.

Not Hitler's opinions but the ruthless application of those opinions over a steadily increasing area has brought the war in Europe. And not defeat of the intangible quality defined as "Hitlerism" but "to free Europe from the menace of aggression" is—in Chamberlain's words—the war aim of the British and French governments. That menace, as distinct from the body of opinion known as "Hitlerism" or "Stalinism," can be stopped "by fire and sword" and perhaps in no other way.

Because Russia is herself now an aggressive imperialism, in the best Czarist tradition, it is to be expected that Izvestia should endeavor to obscure the issue. Nonetheless the basic point which the Communists are making is none the less valid because they have distorted it to help their Nazi allies.

Until the British and French define their war aims in reasonably precise form, and until at least a general idea of the settlement desired becomes apparent, Hitler will have an unnecessary advantage. He, or others for him, will be able to assert that the status quo is shattered like Humpty Dumpty, not to be reconstituted by all the resources of the allies even if the Fuehrer himself is overthrown.

The point is highly debatable, but for that very reason it is not the most desirable basis on which to fight a war. At the appropriate moment, which may not be immediately, specific elaboration of their war aims should come from the French and British governments. Some definition of the program will, it may be assumed, weaken German resistance and by that token advance the peace so universally desired.

WPA And Home Relief

The provision of the relief act requiring the WPA to drop all persons who have been continuously employed for 18 months has had some unexpected results in the New York City area. There, at least, predictions that the burden of caring for dismissed WPA workers would fall on municipalities have not been realized. On the contrary, WPA has taken more people from home relief rolls since the beginning of July than it has transferred to them.

It is too soon, however, to determine the final results of the 18-month rule, because a large number of former WPA workers who have applied for home relief are now being investigated. Others will, no doubt, apply later when their resources are exhausted. For the time being, however, a very large number of the 62,000 persons dismissed from the WPA because they have been employed beyond the legal time limit are not on relief. This showing strongly indicates that the WPA rolls had not previously been cut to a minimum beyond which further reductions would entail severe hardships.

The 18-month rule has had the desired effect of giving many able-bodied persons forced to accept direct municipal relief an opportunity to participate in the work program of the Federal Government. The former practice of permitting workers to remain indefinitely on the WPA rolls is a form of favoritism that has no place in the distribution of public benefits. However, a complication has arisen in New York City which was not foreseen when the relief legislation was passed. A great many of the long-time workers on WPA construction projects cannot, it appears, be replaced by men on the home-relief rolls, because there is a shortage of the kind of labor needed, and an excess of white-collar workers.

As a result of this situation a large number of the dismissed WPA workers are being recertified for jobs as fast as the law permits, while the unneeded white-collar workers "stay put." Thus it is evident that the 18-month rule has not eradicated the discrimination at which it was aimed, although it has reduced the number of chronic relief workers on the WPA pay roll. In fact, workers who have been dropped and reemployed promptly are likely to become convinced of their indispensability and claim a vested interest in their jobs.

Russia In The Baltic

Not content with establishing a virtual protectorate over Estonia and Latvia, Russia has begun to put pressure on Finland in what is obviously an effort to force that nation into the Muscovite orbit.

The specific demands which Stalin is making or planning to make on the Finnish government remain unrevealed. It is a reasonable assumption, however, that Finland will be asked to follow the example of her little neighbors across the Baltic and permit Russia to fortify certain strategic islands at present under Finnish sovereignty. Should such demands be made and granted, Finland's independence would henceforth be at the mercy of Moscow.

For this reason the Finns are certain to resist Russian pressure so far as they dare. But they may not be able to do so sufficiently to prevent Russia from having her way. The upshot of the Russo-Finnish negotiations now about to begin in Moscow, therefore, may be the establishment of a Russian foothold in uncomfortably close proximity to the Scandinavian peninsula.

It would hardly be to Germany's long-run interests to have Russia penetrate any farther into the Baltic area than she has already done, and it would be particularly disadvantageous to Germany were Russia in a position to put pressure on the Scandinavian states. The farther such penetration goes the more difficult Germany's own position becomes.

Cut off from the overseas world by the British blockade, the Third Reich is more dependent than ever on the free flow of raw material supplies from the northern states. And while, as long as the bloom is on the Russo-German rose, Moscow may do nothing to interfere with such traffic, Germany would henceforth have to reckon with the possibility that Stalin might decide to pile double-cross on double-cross and make Germany again pay heavily for Russian good will. The price which Hitler has already been forced to pay to his fellow dictator in East Europe and the Baltic is considerable.

The course of Russia's negotiations with Finland will, therefore, be more than a test of the extent of Russia's imperialistic aims. It will also be a test of Russo-German friendship or what goes for friendship in the relations between two wholly cynical and unscrupulous regimes.

The Roosevelt Medals

Since their establishment, in 1923, the Roosevelt memorial medals have been awarded to a notable galaxy of men and women who have rendered distinguished service in fields associated with the career and interests of Theodore Roosevelt. The names of the latest recipients add lustre to this list.

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired, has achieved a record which ranks him as one of America's most eminent soldier-statesmen. Carl Sandburg, after winning an outstanding reputation as a poet, has established fame as a historian which will undoubtedly be consolidated by the final volumes of his life of Lincoln. And Dr. George Washington Carver, the first Negro to win one of the medals, has gained international recognition as one of the foremost agricultural chemists in the country. His career has again demonstrated that scientific achievement is not the monopoly of any race.

In honoring these three men, the Roosevelt Memorial Association has admirably fulfilled the purpose for which the Roosevelt Medals were established.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Two Kinds Of Menace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Any tips aimed at betterment of Washington's traffic miasma should be received with gratitude. That goes for one coming from the doctors for curbing speed, re-examination of permit applicants for eye defects, etc., even if its impossible to share their optimism that such superficials will yield definite results.

Physical and eye examinations as a means of eliminating the unfit may help; but many of these people, realizing their defects, recognizing they come under the "bum driver" label, drive with restraint, precision and human consideration (the basis of the desired reforms, if I understand correctly) whereas the speed moron with all faculties intact, who could pass the most severe "reactions" test, rampages with screeching horn and heavy foot on accelerator, 10 times the menace his inferior neighbor may be.

I. H. LATIMER.
Washington, Oct. 6.

Hard Questions

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: A good many people in all walks of life are finding it hard to think straightly and sensibly about the international situation because of the fear in the back of their hearts that Hitler or Stalin will defeat the Allies and turn later, if not at once, upon the United States.

Your paper would be doing a public and patriotic service by discussing as objectively and concretely as possible the actual danger to America of a British-French defeat. For instance, would Hitler move into Bermuda and Canada, or march into Brazil? Would he be able to capture intact a large part of the British navy? Would Russia invade us via the Bering Strait?

These are not questions susceptible to wholly factual answers, but if they can be authoritatively taken by the forelock and looked in the face, it would help the temper of our national thinking and possibly our legislative action.

CAROLYN H. PLANCK.
Arlington, Va., Oct. 6.

Warning To The 'Iroquois'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The warning of Admiral Raeder, head of the German Navy, that the American liner Iroquois is to be sunk in circumstances similar to those which surrounded the sinking of the Athenia is so extraordinary as to cause speculation concerning its purpose.

Is it not possible that this warning was specifically designed to influence the action of the Senate on neutrality revision? Should the Senate now be stampeded by this announced danger to an American ship into immediate action of the cash-and-carry provisions of the pending neutrality bill and postponement of the battle over the arms embargo, it might be hoped in Berlin that the prospects of repeal of the arms embargo would be decreased.

If this is the purpose of Admiral Raeder's warning, it would be served by his warning alone, unsupported by fact or by any actual attack upon the Iroquois.

LIVINGSTON HARTLEY.

Undemocratic Raid

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent raid on the office of the League for Peace and Democracy by the Dies Committee is a direct violation of civil liberties, and as a democratic government we should not permit such undemocratic actions by any group.

Are we living in Nazi Germany today that government employes cannot belong to liberal and progressive organizations? If we permit Dies and his committee to get away with such actions what is to prevent their raiding private homes, simply because this little committee chooses to do so? ELLEN KAYE.
Washington, Oct. 7.

Advocates Return To International Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The world will be convinced that "there is no right we shall ever defend and no injury we shall ever resist," if Congress seeks in any way to appease the aggressor nations. Any sign of weakness on our part will certainly invite aggressions upon our rights and privileges.

Those nations that have attempted to appease aggressors, themselves became the victims of aggression. Certainly, no nation should proclaim to the world that it is unwilling to protect the rights of its citizens.

Britain's unwillingness to protect its shipping during the Spanish civil war invited further aggressions upon her maritime interests. Britain's unwillingness to protect her rights and privileges in China invited the infliction of additional losses upon British interests. The refusal of France to resist German reoccupation and remilitarization of the Rhineland made the German threat to France a more grim reality. Furthermore, it obviously paved the way for the surrender at Munich.

In the words of Walter Lippmann, "the attitude expressed by Senator Borah, an attitude of confessed fear and impotence, is the one most likely to involve this country in war." Even "the bill which is now before the Senate calls for such a sweeping abandonment of American rights, such a far-reaching renunciation of principles for which this country has contended for more than a century, that only the most compelling reasons can justify it."

To prohibit American vessels from entering specified zones when the United States is not at war, however, is arbitrary. It denies American citizens certain privileges which seem inherently theirs under a democratic form of Government. In any case, it is likely to damage American shipping interests which this country has tried so long and so strenuously to promote. If such voyages were prohibited, there would be a strong moral obligation upon the United States Government to compensate the shippers for damages resulting from this prohibition.

To notify shippers that voyages in certain areas are at the risk of the shippers—the President's suggestion—would be more fitting and proper. Nevertheless, even in these circumstances, there would still be a strong moral obligation on the part of the United States to provide war risk insurance to cover the hulls and cargoes as well as the masters, officers and crews of American merchant vessels. Such insurance was offered by the United States Government from almost the start of the World War. On September 2, 1914, almost two and a half years before our entry into the World War, the Bureau of War Risk Insurance was created.

In any event, the existing embargo which prevents the sale of airplanes, guns and ammunition, etc., when the United States is at peace seems to be an infringement upon personal rights under the Constitution and to conflict with the principles of American democracy.

The United States should repeal the existing erroneously called neutrality act and return to traditional neutrality under international law. It is just as dangerous to experiment with new legislation when a holocaust is raging in the world as to change horses in the middle of a stream.

EDWIN TRENT.
New York City, Oct. 6.

A Vital Stake

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The arms-embargo proposition is not quite the simple one we were led to believe, nor is it predicated on the aim to keep this country out of the European war.

If words mean anything at all, those fighting repeal definitely are aligning themselves against the democracies.

It is recognized by Americans of both parties or none at all that we too have a vital stake in the war game now on. What then will be the outlook for America in the event of a totalitarian victory, and on a greater scale than they first hoped for?

It may be that neither Germany nor Russia have immediate designs on America, but none can deny they have, particularly Germany, definite plans regarding our neighbors in South and Central America.

SAMUEL SALOMAN.
Washington, Sept. 30.

Sees A Distinction

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Stress, preach, shout, boom that vitally real distinction between war materials (guns, gun-cotton, shells, aircraft) and non-war materials (food, timber, metals). The Senate doesn't seem to understand. The President is actually trying to make us believe it is all the same thing. Life destroyers and life sustainers the same thing? Really, now, who could believe that? J. B.
Washington, Oct. 8.

Cash-And-Carry

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: To keep the United States out of war is the object of the cash-and-carry bill. President Roosevelt, the majority of our Governors, the majority of our newspapers are convinced we can best keep out of war by adopting the bill.

Some believe we can best keep out of war by not adopting the cash-and-carry bill. The majority of the letters to Congress are against cash-and-carry. Many of these, however, show the writers have not realized that the real object of the bill is to keep us out of war.

The more clearly it is realized that the object of cash-and-carry is not to help England nor France nor to help production, except as these things help to keep us out of war, the larger will be the majority in its favor.

I. MELDRUM.
Washington, Oct. 7.

If Germany Wins

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: German victory, quick or delayed, would compel us to militarize. I think that would be good for us. The average young American would be the better for a year in the Army or Navy. Does any American regret his term of service?

Another result of German victory would be an alliance between the United States and Canada, possibly a union. We should be one nation from the Rio Grande to the Pole, realizing the oldest of American dreams. And not only Canada but all French and British possessions in the Western Hemisphere should swing into our orbit. Allied prestige would be so reduced.

I concede all that you have asserted of the sinister possibilities of German victory, but I have searched your beautifully written editorials in vain for any hint of how German victory could profit us.

With only five great powers left—the United States, Germany, Britain-France-Italy, Russia and Japan—the ideal of world peace is attainable. It is impossible while power and responsibility are parceled among a hundred bickering states.

I am signing a false name to this, lest I be hung to a lamppost for suggesting that we might profit by the defeat of the mother country.

JOHN SMITH.

The Post Impressionist

O Tannenbaum!

WHEN THE early October sun is resting on the Christmas tree, as it was doing the afternoon I saw it, there is no need for turning on the myriad electric bulbs which are fastened to every branch.

There is something incongruous in writing about Christmas trees now. Probably the only people writing about Christmas trees, besides myself, are the short story authors getting their God-rest-ye-merry-gentlemen copy in for the December issue.

So if I seem to be rushing the season, I beg to be excused on the ground that the whole business is none of my doing. The credit, or blame, rests entirely with the Pentecosts who live three blocks over and one block down from my place. The Pentecosts are by way of being local celebrities. Their fame has nothing to do with building a better mouse trap or winning the Irish Sweepstakes. It's simply that on last New Year's Day they conceived the unholy idea of keeping their Christmas tree, with all its trimmings, throughout the whole year. That got them into the papers and me into their house.

The thought first came to Mr. Pentecost as he and his wife prepared to dismantle the tree and put the ornaments away until next year. To begin with, the tree was an unusually large one and beautifully shaped. So it was decided that old-fashioned gewgaws, as well as modern electricity, would be used for ornamentation. That meant stringing yards and yards of snowy white popcorn, cutting up hundreds of brightly colored magazine advertisements into loops for chains, and making endless necklaces of red cranberries. A blanket of white cotton was laid around the base of the tree and on it were showered silver flecks of synthetic snow. Around this, more cotton was spread so that a miniature village might snuggle down into its folds.

Gradually the tree became a thing of truly regal beauty pushing against the ceiling. The toy village beneath it, perfect in every detail, might have been any small town caught in winter's toils. No one of sentimental inclinations could gaze upon it without nostalgic twinges.

Over there, as if on the edge of town, clung the little railroad station. The word "TICKETS" was printed over one of its windows. Headed toward the tracks, with a grip in his hand, was a broadly smiling, 3-in-high porter. You could almost hear the train tooting around the bend as it wound its circuitous way through papier-mache tunnels and over uncertain bridges held together with thumb tacks. Small houses marched along to the center of town, where a courthouse reared its steeple toward a sky that wasn't there. Lilliputian trucks and automobiles risked their all on icy streets created, not by Mother Nature, but by disguised mirrors. Children and dogs formed happy little groups, apparently unaware that they were eternally doomed to stationary play.

At night, or when visitors come in, the current is turned on and the whole corner of the living room seems to spring into life. The lights glow like a million eyes, the tinsel ropes shed their tawdriness and beam, the little train runs madly around its single track, and over it all the immense star at the very top looks down beneficently.

Someone knocked on the door and the Pentecosts excused themselves for a moment, leaving me in the room with 6-year-old Tommy Pentecost and his sister, Dorothy, 2 years older. There's nothing as hard as making polite conversation with strange children.

"Aren't you two fortunate," I beamed at them, "having a Christmas tree all year round?"

"Aw, we hate it," Tommy spoke out vehemently. "But don't tell Mom," he added cautiously.

"Yeah," agreed his big sister, "it won't be any fun now when Christmas really comes. All the other kids'll be surprised and we won't. Gee, it's awful silly for Mom and Dad to keep this old thing up." She hushed as her mother re-entered the room. Before I could console the children, they had run out to play.

Mrs. Pentecost shook her head slowly and smiled patiently the way nurses do when they're humoring a very sick person.

"I really shouldn't spoil them this way," she said to me, "but the children were so crazy about this tree last Christmas. Besides, I think it would have broken Mr. Pentecost's heart to dismantle it. He spent months making all those little houses and mountains."

"But aren't you fond of it, too?" I asked.

"My dear girl, I should say not!" she exclaimed. "It's the biggest nuisance I ever had in my life. Who do you think sweeps up pine needles all day long? Who do you think strings fresh popcorn every month or so? Who do you think remembers to replace burnt-out bulbs? I do! All Mr. Pentecost does is turn on the switch and let that silly little train run itself to death." Then she composed herself again. "But please don't mention a word of this. I wouldn't have it get back to John or the children for the world."

Mr. Pentecost helped me into my car.

"Aren't women and children the darndest things?" he asked. "Wanting to keep that old tree up and getting us in the paper and all. Why, I'm downright embarrassed about it. But I say if a man can't do little things to make his wife and kids happy, then what can he do? Well, it's been nice of you to come and see it. And just don't let on I said anything."

Bootleg Throwback

IN THE MATTER of the distressed Americans abroad who have been having such trouble finding ship room for the voyage home, the background of the picture needs retouching to recall that during prohibition Americans bound abroad to catch up on their drinking avoided American ships and built up the passenger trade of European countries at the expense of the American service. Any flag but the Stars and Stripes was good enough for most American travelers then, and European nations used money which they owed the U. S. A. to build boats to catch their trade.

In justice to the tourists it must be allowed that they were sick of the noble experiment and made a pathetic spectacle in their attempts at nonchalance as they waited for the steward to rattle the key in the door of the lounge by way of intimating that they had now crossed the 3-mile limit and could now get drunk on the real McCoy.

From time to time the stewards fudged a little and would pop corks before the ships tied loose, and a merchant going abroad to sell a load of hides or buy caviar for the suburban trade at home would discover himself attended by enough loving friends to swing an election, all with their tongues hanging out like red neckties and all sniffing the close air of the passageways for the fumes of Martinis and Scotch.

When time came to shove off they would come yodeling down the gangplank pickled to the eyeballs and vowing to sweep some money together right soon and go abroad themselves, and not on any American ship, either, but on one of those French, British, Italian or German boats, or possibly a Dutchman.

Some U. S. Boats Cheated A Little

NOT ONLY CITIZENS in private life, but officials and members of their families favored the European lines, and the American service was so badly neglected that just now, when an emergency comes, it is obvious that the vast majority of the stranded landsmen must have gone over on foreign boats by choice.

True, a policy of cheating was adopted on the American ships, but now and again some bloodless he-harridan of the dry political persuasion would rear back on his hind legs in Congress and utter a bawl of moral outrage at this wanton violation of the sacred amendment in plain sight of Old Glory.

The lid would then go down again with a loud clank of publicity. The result was that Americans couldn't be sure of getting a decent drink on their own ships, and rather than take a chance avoided them altogether. The United States boats lost reputation with their own people, and some upsetting experiences with ribald stewards helped to unsteady the confidence of those who were not primarily interested in getting tight with the least possible delay but only wanted comfort and a reasonable degree of safety.

In the course of this fun spell the European ships got almost all of publicity both in text and pictures because the celebrities who made print were aboard them. American ships were for old folks, dowds, dummies and persons one just naturally would prefer not to have any truck with until a time came when there was some risk aboard the European lines, then, very suddenly, a whole season's catch on European soil became passionately patriotic to the grand old American name.

Good Old U. S. Soil Just Dirt To Many

IT MIGHT BE remembered, too, that among this worried and daily more indignant slew there were many to whom American soil was not even dirt under their feet—men and women of the old bandit families who have been living abroad for years on income earned for them by American workmen and paid them through their bankers.

This class come home only to split up the estates of deceased relatives, get periodic Reno divorces and escape periodic wars, and they are related, in spirit, to that other group of less wealthy but no less lazy and contemptuous loafers who think the Old World has much better manners, think bathing is overdone at home and love the French and Italians because the franc and the lira are cheap.

And with them may be lumped those seminaturalized foreigners who endure life here just long enough to quality for citizenship and passports and then return to Europe and other far places to pose as Americans, pester the consuls and meddle in the affairs of other nations with no intention ever to be real Americans in heart or in act or even to learn the American language.

There are some astonishingly foreign Americans holding American citizenship abroad who, in times of danger, yield nothing to the most obstreperous native patrioteer in their devotion to the Stars and Stripes.

The repatriation of strayed and stranded Americans is Government business, no doubt, but not all of them have an urgent claim on the indignation or sympathy of the State Department or the folk at home.

The Fuehrer Seems Skeptical of Success In Westwall Drive

ALTHOUGH HITLER has sought to give the impression that the choice is now between peace on his terms and the outbreak of total war in the west, there is in fact another alternative. It is that the Allies will not undertake a great offensive against Germany, and that Hitler, finding that the odds are too poor, will not undertake a great offensive against the Allies.

In fact, the present situation is unintelligible unless we realize that there are not two choices, but three; one, an Allied capitulation to Hitler; two, an offensive by Hitler in which he risks everything to gain everything; and three, an inactive state of war in which Hitler remains blockaded, besieged, politically encircled and morally isolated.

His Campaign Shows No Sign Of Success

FOR THE MOMENT Hitler is endeavoring to obtain the first solution, namely Allied capitulation, by enlisting the support of Russia, Italy, and the United States. The campaign shows no signs of succeeding. For while the Russians are letting him talk about the great help that they are going to give him, every day it becomes clearer that Russia is constructing a great defensive barrier from the Baltic to the Black Sea, and that Russian influence, directly or indirectly, is effecting the creation of a barrier of neutral states that includes Yugoslavia, Hungary, and the Balkans.

As for Italy, it is now reasonably certain that Count Ciano ruptured the axis when he saw Hitler in August, and that he was given the highest Italian decoration for it by the King of Italy; it is no less clear that on his second visit to Hitler a few days ago Count Ciano, acting of course for Mussolini, declined to support the present peace offensive. And although the Italian press gives some editorial support to Hitler's maneuver, the Italian will to maintain neutrality deprives the newspaper editorials of any real effect.

As for the semi-official suggestion from Berlin that the President should now intervene, it is obvious that the United States can contemplate no such dangerous entanglement. For if Hitler wants an armistice that the Allies could accept, he does not need the President to convey the message. It can be conveyed through the small European neutrals. But if what he wants is that the United States should compel the Allies to give him an armistice, then the answer is that the United States would at once be morally committed to support the Allies if the failure of the negotiations undermined their position and exposed them to new dangers.

Though there are a few extremely half-baked "isolationists" who have rushed into print in favor of the plan, it will be evident to Congress and the people that to accept the suggestion would be the perfect way to burn our fingers pulling Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire, and in the name of peace to entangle this country in the intricate complications of the European problem.

Appears In Doubt On Outcome Of West Attack

AS HE FAILS to obtain by propaganda a victorious peace, Hitler is confronted with the dread question of whether he can and must attempt an offensive in the west. It may be that he has already taken his decision and that he will strike. But there are many indications that he has not yet taken it. His hesitation can be due only to deep doubt about the outcome of an offensive. For when he has felt sure he could win, as he did before the attack on Poland, he scorned negotiations and no humanitarian consideration affected his calculations. So we must assume that if he knew he could win in the west, he would be sure to strike.

For only by a victory in the west can he break out of the blockade and the encirclement which his politically disastrous Polish victory has drawn around him.

IF HE CANNOT break the Allied pressure by propaganda, then a victorious offensive in the west is the only alternative to being besieged and to being reduced to an inactive, frustrated, suffocating defensive. But an offensive is a terrible gamble. Against good fortifications, which the Poles altogether lacked, and against seasoned troops with good generals, the offensive is a hideous operation. At a conservative estimate it requires a superiority of at least three to one in men and materials, and a willingness to suffer losses in at least the same proportion. If Hitler attempted the offensive and failed, the elite of the German youth who are the backbone of Naziism in Germany today would be decimated. To win in the west he must sacrifice precisely that part of the German people on which depends the popular support of his regime.

Perhaps he will take the risk. His behavior in August when he sacrificed his whole position in Eastern Europe indicates that the one thing he cannot face is inactivity and frustration. If, for his victory over Poland, he felt he had to break with his allies, invite Russia into Central Europe, and abandon the whole famous crusade against bolshevism, then it may well be that now he will risk a million young Nazis and the collapse of his regime rather than face the inactivity of a prolonged Allied siege. But it is in either event a desperate choice.

Prompt Neutrality Bill Action Urged

THE ONLY THING that can hope to deter him from choosing a great and bloody offensive would be the certainty in the minds of the German military leaders, on the one hand, that the offensive must fail, and, on the other hand, that the Allied siege will not result in another Versailles. If the Germans can be made to see that a military victory is impossible but that a decent peace is possible, Europe may yet be spared the incalculable horrors of war to the bitter end.

That is why the prompt enactment of the neutrality bill would be an enormous contribution to peace, doubly a contribution in that it will keep the country out of the war if the war becomes total and furious in Europe, and immediately, in that the lifting of the arms embargo will be a very powerful deterrent against undertaking a great offensive in the west. That also is the reason why the time has come for the Allies to state their war aims, with a view to making clear to the German nation that the siege can be lifted whenever they have a government with which it is possible to negotiate.

Allies Do Not Have Territorial Aims

THE STATEMENT of Allied war aims presents no such difficulties as it did during the World War. For then the British and French had allies, Russia and Italy, and Japan, whose support had been purchased by the secret treaties, and the Allies themselves had territorial ambitions, namely Alsace-Lorraine and the dismemberment of the Turkish empire and the distribution of the German colonies among themselves, the British dominions, and Japan. This is not the case today. There is no German territory they themselves could want, and they have no allies who have to be compensated.

They can, therefore, say that they want no annexations, and, having learned the bitter lesson of the nineteen twenties, they will seek no indemnities. They can declare that they are not fighting for the restoration of the Versailles boundaries or the Versailles system, they can point to Munich as proof of their willingness to negotiate a revision of the Versailles system. They can declare that they are not committed to the 1919 or to the 1939 frontiers in Central Europe but to the liberation of the Czech and Polish peoples. They can declare that the colonial question is open to negotiation but that the handing over of helpless colonial peoples to Nazi rule is not negotiable.

And, by holding to the defensive strategy which they have so wisely adopted since the beginning of the war, they can prove that they are not seeking to conquer or destroy Germany.

Life's Darkest Moment

Russo-German Trade

THE CHART shown above, depicting the sharp shrinkage in the trade between Germany and the Soviet Union since 1930, is of special interest in view of the recent rapprochement between these countries. The decline in their trade began abruptly in 1933, the year of Hitler's accession to power, and by 1938 their exchange of goods seemed to be approaching the vanishing point.

The recession, however, was due only in part to the growing hostility of the Nazi and Communist regimes in these years. Another important factor was the desire of the totalitarian governments to attain a greater degree of economic self-sufficiency.

THAT GERMANY, in spite of her restrictive commercial policy, would have been glad to retain the Russian market for her exports was indicated by her extension of substantial credits to the Soviet Union in 1933, 1935 and 1936.

Notwithstanding these loans, trade languished. As recently as August 19 Moscow obtained another loan of 200,000,000 marks, and on September 29 the two governments reached a new agreement under which the Soviet Union would supply Germany with needed materials "to be paid for by industrial supplies stretched over a long time."

It is open to question, however, whether Russia can spare enough war materials to offset the Anglo-French blockade now in effect against Germany. Indeed, there are some essential materials which the Russians would be unable to furnish even if they were in a mood for self-sacrifice.

100,000 Germans Flee Baltic Area

transfer of some 10,000 Germans.)

According to Hitler's speech, which announced an end to German expansion, German minorities are to be evacuated, not only from the Baltics, but also from central and southeast European states and Soviet Russia itself.

[Widely published Bucharest dispatches said Germany has been conducting secret discussions for several weeks with Balkan nations relative to transplanting southeastern European minorities to Germany, the Associated Press reported.

[These dispatches said a plan had been advanced whereby Germany would pay expenses for transporting as many of the 2,000,000 Germans now residing in Rumania, Yugoslavia and Hungary as wish to settle in what were western Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

[Russia was said to have informed Germany confidentially that to make room for repatriated Germans in these areas she would admit Czechs and Slovaks who were willing to emigrate to Russian farms or industrial areas.—Editor's note.]

Ten Nazi Ships at Riga

Riga, Latvia, Oct. 9 (AP).—A great exodus of Germans from the Baltic states was in full swing tonight with a big fleet of German vessels pressed into service.

Ten German steamers already were in Riga's harbor. Four others were at Leipaja (Libau) and Ventspils (Windau). All were loading emigrants from Latvia, with their belongings.

Four other vessels arrived at Tallinn, Estonia.

Lithuania has a common border with Germany and emigration from that country may be handled by rail. Repatriation was obligatory only in the cases of German citizens; in Latvia they number only 4,500.

Latvian citizens of the German race, however, were estimated here to number 56,000, of which 38,000 were residents of Riga.

Latvia's largest newspaper estimated the value of German holdings in Latvia at 1,500,000,000 reichsmarks (about $600,000,000).

It was generally believed in Riga that about half of the Latvian Germans, chiefly young people, would emigrate.

Tallinn, Estonia, Oct. 9.—While units of the Red Army marched into Estonia today to garrison the bases "granted" to Russia, 16,000 persons belonging to the German minority group were making feverish preparations to leave Estonia at Fuehrer Hitler's bidding.

So speedy is the evacuation that the refugees will not have time to pay their Estonian taxes. Forty-eight hours were allowed in many cases.

Passage Probable

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT seems likely, at this time, to get approximately the neutrality measure he has asked for. (Though it is possible the debate, if it should be prolonged, might pass into a new phase; that the whole subject of neutrality might be approached from a standpoint new at this time but very old—the broad standpoint of long-accepted international law.)

If Mr. Roosevelt gets the measure he has asked for, he will get it in part by the votes of Senators who, on personal grounds and public grounds, have reason to oppose him. He will get it by the votes of Democratic Senators he personally tried to "purge," such as George, of Georgia, and Smith, of South Carolina; and by the votes of other Democratic Senators whom Mr. Roosevelt's intimates tried to purge, such as Mr. Gillette, of Iowa.

Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure by the votes of yet other Democratic Senators whom some of Mr. Roosevelt's radical followers have held up to public scorn as "Tories," such as Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia, and Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, who was the choice of most of the Democratic Senators for floor leader, but who was defeated because Mr. Roosevelt put his influence behind Senator Barkley, of Kentucky. And Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure in part by the votes of some Republican Senators who, disregarding partisanship, believe that in the matter of neutrality Mr. Roosevelt's proposal is better than the existing law.

In this situation Mr. Roosevelt owes a debt of tolerance to Congress. He does not seem to pay it when he shows reluctance to let Congress function beyond a limit he suggests, or even to have Congress remain in Washington indefinitely. Mr. Roosevelt has made it plain that he prefers Congress, in this special session, should act on the neutrality measure and nothing else.

Stand May Impede The Neutrality Bill

IN THIS ATTITUDE Mr. Roosevelt has gone to considerable length. Recently, in expanding the Army and Navy, the President had occasion to make expenditures for buildings beyond the amount provided in the regular appropriation measures passed in the regular session of Congress. As a way of meeting this difficulty, Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would make the necessary expenditures anyhow, relying upon Congress to take care of the deficiency when it meets in regular session in January. The amount of money involved is slight; as a going beyond authority, the incident is not important. But members of Congress wonder why the President should not conform to rule by simply asking the present special session of Congress to make the necessary appropriation—it would consume very little time.

If this were a mere matter of expediting the neutrality measure, of avoiding interference with the neutrality debate by introduction of any other matter, Congress would understand. But it is apparent Mr. Roosevelt's preference is that this special session of Congress should deal only with the neutrality measure and then go home, until the regular session in January.

This position of Mr. Roosevelt, rather than speeding the neutrality measure, may impede it. Some of the leadership of Congress thinks that Congress ought to be in session more or less continuously throughout the period of emergency created by the war in Europe. Some of the time consumed in acting upon the neutrality measure will be merely a way of keeping Congress in Washington.

Roosevelt Must Get Along With Congress

ALSO, THIS ATTITUDE of Mr. Roosevelt toward Congress results in his getting smaller powers than he otherwise might. The pending neutrality measure does not give the President as much power or discretion as many think that a President should have, at a time when the country faces the unpredictable day-to-day problems arising out of war abroad.

In the belief of many, the really wise way to achieve neutrality, and to handle the problems arising from war abroad, would be to abandon completely the artificial and strained so-called neutrality bill, and go back to the basis we had under a score of Presidents preceding Mr. Roosevelt, for a century and a quarter preceding 1935, the basis of international law. But when this was proposed, responsible Democratic leaders said that not ten Senators would vote for it. The Senators would not vote for it because they are hesitant to give great power and discretion to the President.

The present President and the present Congress must get along together for nearly a year and a quarter until January, 1941. The present session, special, will last as long as it lasts—that is, until the neutrality measure is disposed of. Thereafter, for six weeks or what-not, there will be no Congress in session. In January the regular session has no statutory limit—it could go for a full year, until January, 1941. In practice, however, this session would be likely to end about July first. For 1940 is a major political year, with nominations and elections of a President, the whole membership of the House, and a third of the Senate. As a rule Congress tries to wind up its work simultaneously with the national conventions in June or July.

This practice if followed next year would result in no session of Congress, unless specially called, between about July 1 and January 1. It hardly seems probable that conditions next year will permit so long a recess.

By Barnet Nover

Europe Between Campaigns

IN HIS RADIO address of October 1, Winston Churchill spoke of Russia's future policy as a "riddle wrapped in mystery inside an enigma." The characterization is apt. But if no man other than Joseph Stalin can predict with any degree of certainty what course the Moscow government will pursue in the days that lie ahead, the whole world knows what Russia has been doing in the weeks that have just gone by. And in these activities of the recent past, as Churchill made bold to suggest, there may be the key to Russia's action in the future.

In the course of the past month, Russia joined Germany in partitioning Poland, brought her frontiers to the borders of Hungary, established what are, in effect, protectorates over the Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and is now seeking to extend her domination over Finland.

IN ONE FELL swoop, therefore, the Russia of the Bolsheviks has reverted to the Russia of the Czars, and Stalin has taken up the role of Peter the Great. That has ominous possibilities for Great Britain. If the expansionist policy of Russia which was interrupted in 1917, except for a foray into Outer Mongolia and penetration into Chinese Turkestan, is now to be resumed, it may mean a revival of Russia's southward thrust in the Middle East in the ultimate direction of the Persian Gulf and India.

But if Great Britain has reason to be perturbed by the Russian volte-face from a state preaching the indivisibility of peace to one employing the full armory of the aggressors, so, too, has Germany.

FOR HITLER the deal with Russia was the greatest of the many gambles he has attempted in his meteoric career and one which bears in it the possibility of tremendous disaster.

If his present peace offensive succeeds, if Great Britain and France are willing to lay down their arms in return for the promises of good behavior he made in his Reichstag speech, then the change in Russian policy which he bought at so great a price may not prove worth the cost.

The events of the past years have proved again that frontiers are not unchangeable. A peace in line with the Reichstag speech would be equivalent to a French and British capitulation. Hitler would no longer have anything to fear from Great Britain and France. Germany could, with still unimpaired resources, address herself to holding Russia in check in the east and, when it became feasible, revert to the Drang Nach Osten policy outlined with such vehemence in "Mein Kampf."

The Bolshevik leaders certainly can be under no illusions as to the permanence of Hitler's newfound friendship for them and their nation. Indeed, the zeal displayed by the Bolsheviks in acquiring territory and strategic bases in areas along the line of Hitler's temporarily abandoned route of empire shows that they are anxious to build as speedily as possible a barrier to Germany's future ambitions in the east.

THE QUESTION may be asked, therefore: "Why are the Kremlin's journalistic mouthpieces sounding off in favor of Hitler's peace offer? Is is merely as a form of platonic payment to Germany for favors already granted? That may be. Italy, for instance, though refusing to become the medium for the Fuehrer's peace offer, is also giving verbal support to it.

But another reason may be that it may suit Russia's present purposes to preserve the present balance of power in Europe, with an undefeated Britain and France checkmating a partially victorious Germany and Russia herself in the key position. Whether, if the peace offensive fails, Russia will go further and give armed support to Germany is not clear, but it is unlikely. Russia, like Hitler before September 1, wants to gain her ends without direct involvement in a major war and believes she can do so.

Peace on the basis of the status quo may seem desirable to Stalin. It is absolutely essential to Hitler. The alternative to peace is, so far as Germany is concerned, either a stalemate on the Western Front or a frontal attack on the Allies. In the one case with the bulk of German military might concentrated on the French frontier the Reich would be in no position to stop Russia's further aggressions in the Baltic and elsewhere. In the other case Germany might break her neck in the attempt to overwhelm the Allies. Neither possibility can appear to Hitler in any pleasant light. There is danger for him in standing still and even greater danger in pushing forward.

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to permit John S. Farnsworth, former Navy officer, to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain his release from Atlanta Penitentiary, where he is serving a sentence for conspiring with Japanese naval officers to disclose unlawfully information affecting the national defense.

Sentenced in the District of Columbia, Farnsworth sought to file the petition directly with the Supreme Court. The high tribunal previously had refused to pass on the action of lower courts dismissing his habeas corpus petition.

In the latest week, the gains included $6,000,000 each in the New York and San Francisco Federal Reserve districts and $5,000,000 in the St. Louis district.

(Occasioned by a newspaper photo of a Parisian puppy in a gas mask.)

I feel funny, I feel queer—
Something's very wrong, I fear;
Things like this I never wore—
Tell me, master, what it's for?

Slipped on o'er my face and head,
How it fills my soul with dread!
Answer me this one appeal—
Do I look the way I feel?

How it makes my spirits sag,
Feeling that I'm in the bag!
Awesome thing of ugly fit,
Why am I inside of it?

Two big portholes o'er my eyes,
I would never take a prize;
Tin container o'er my nose,
I am all beset by woes.

It was snapped on me today
For protection, so they say;
But without a sense of smell
Life to any pup is hell!

It's so stuffy on my head;
I would take a chance instead
On whatever dangers they Seem to think might come my way.

I can't sniff and I can't bark—
Life to me is, oh, so dark!
Tho I wear it but a while
How the darned thing cramps my style!

I feel futile and a sight
In this darned contraption tight;
I look worse, it's pretty clear,
From the front than from the rear.

What the deuce is this about?
Speak and drive away all doubt!
Gas mask? German bombing raid?
This is much worse, I'm afraid.

Airplanes, bombs and towns laid flat?
Mine's a crisis worse than that;
With this clumsy mask on me
Right now, Kids, I've GOT A FLEA!

The Washington Chapter, American In stitute of Architects, whose members have split on whether Washington is a model city or an architectural hodgepodge built to order for sightseers, should know that hundreds of sightseers view it—at least from above—as "the world Capital of tomorrow."

This disclosure on the viewpoint of tourists was made yesterday by officials of the omnipresent Goodyear Blimp Enterprise, who more and more hear the exclamation, "It's like the world of tomorrow" as the blimp, one of Washington's most obvious objects, ascends.

Post Staff Photos from Goodyear Blimp Enterprise.

It speedily is gathered that most of the passengers who so conclude on the city's appearance have just come down from the World's Fair, with the original world of tomorrow still in their imaginations.

Another aspect of the Nation's Capital that gets most all of them in the air, is sight of the Circles. They say: "Look how those rings cut the streets up; no wonder we got lost this morning." The blimp, like Washington, is now watching the tourist season slide. It's business (26,750 passengers; 12,225 flights in the last four and a half years) is one of the earmarks of the tourist season rise and decline here. But no one here notices the blimp much because it's so obvious.

Schoolboy Bachelor Club Cooks

Whipping Up Some Cakes

A new idea appeared from nowhere at Mount Rainier (Md.) High School last week, spread like wildfire among the boys, and by yesterday the girls had lost some important advance positions in the age-old battle of the sexes.

Determined to beat the young ladies at their own game of cooking and sewing, 113 boys had signed up yesterday afternoon for a "bachelor's club" under the guidance of Miss Mary Speake, instructor of home economics.

Just who thought of the plan first or what its specific purpose is was impossible to discover yesterday, but the comments of the boys showed they chiefly want to reassert the doctrine of "superior male" and regain some of their independence from the onslaughts of modern feminism.

"You never can tell when you may have to do your own cooking and sewing," said Oscar Link, 17, one of the leaders of the movement. "It's just as well to know how. Besides, maybe we can go into business."

Donald Xander, 18, declared: "I want to be able to show my wife how to do these things; maybe she wouldn't know how." Donald's father used to be a baker, and he has a lot of faith in man's prowess in kitchens.

According to Miss Speake, the boys only want to darn their socks and sew on buttons, and make pies and cakes. Donald showed no inclination to confine himself to elementary cooking; "this thing will turn out pretty good if we put our minds on it," he remarked.

Classes are due to start tomorrow, with sophomores, juniors and seniors in the club. Miss Speake thought 113 boys would be rather a lot to handle, and suggested the class might have to be cut down; or maybe other teachers would be drafted to help

Boarding School Girls Set Trap for Conceited Son Of Wealth; Joke Backfires; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read your column consistently since I came to Virginia to school last fall. To get right to the point, it's the same old story—a boy. He's frightfully conceited; thinks—because he has a great deal of money and is good looking—that every girl should be flattered if he even speaks to her. His most exasperating habit is talking constantly about his social position.

Here's where I came in: A bunch of girls here at school, who had dated him the year before I came, decided he should be taken down a peg. I happened to be the type that appeals to him (tall, blonde), so the job fell to me, although several new girls were considered . . . My chief task was to turn on the charm . . . After a month, I was to tell him what a fool we all thought he was; and that, in my opinion, he was a conceited windbag.

Well, we started dating, as planned. He was more than attentive—invitations for every free moment I had; flowers; telegrams; nightly telephone calls; candy; everything a girl could dream of. As part of the plot, I had told him that he "fascinated me." This he took to mean, "I love you." Everything was set for the awful let-down when, suddenly, he rushed in with an invitation to the "high point" of his school's social season. After that, I just couldn't go through with the trick, which I realize now was unspeakable, even when aimed against somebody who deserved it.

Since then, I have really tried to break things off gently. I thought the summer vacation would take care of the situation, but it didn't. We're both back in school and he is just as attentive as ever. The other night he started slight advances which I thought would lead to grounds for a fight, but he stopped (out of a clear sky) well within the limits of propriety. I've used the "restrictions" excuse; also have claimed to have dates that I haven't had. I want to be free of the whole thing; but in spite of my original attitude, I don't want to appear in my true colors or to hurt him. Please advise me.

Truth Session Would Clear the Air

DEAR E. B.: What's the matter? Are you falling in love with the boy? Or is it rather, that he has fallen in love with you, whereas you don't like him any better today than you did the first day? You haven't given a clear account of the situation as it is today, between you two. If you are beginning to care for him, I think you ought to tell him, lightly and contritely and immediately, just what you had in mind when you started seeing him. Because if you don't, someone else will—and it will be harder for him to take from other lips, and also will make it impossible for him ever to trust you completely again.

However, if you don't care for him—and I notice that you do use the present tense in citing his conceit and snobbery—and simply feel (a) sorry for him because he has fallen victim to heartless wiles, and (b) ashamed of yourself for having used them, then do what any girl does who tires of being crowded by an unwanted, ubiquitous suitor. Namely—give him the air. Decline (or, as the phrase goes, "regret"), his invitations as fast as he extends them.

Give him polite but irrefutable reasons why you cannot accept; and stand your ground. There is no point in being wishy-washy and calling it "gentle." You've got to be firm, if you hope to make it stick. And you will be firm, if you are sincere in wanting to turn him loose. If you feel and behave half heartedly, you had better go over the ground carefully and discover whether you haven't fallen into the trap that was set for him.

It is difficult to believe—as you would have me believe—that you are suddenly suffused with impersonal compassion for the fellow. Yet, if that is true; if you have learned that, taken all in all, and with his hair down, he isn't a half bad sort, who means very well in his own peculiar way—then I suggest that you tell him the "awful truth" about both of you. Tell him that you started out with the intention of proving one sort of case against him, but have ended up, instead, by proving another and equally unflattering case against yourself.

This should pave the way for a candid discussion of your respective sets of shortcomings; which, if humorously and tactfully done, ought to clear the air, once and for all, of the heady perfumes of romance, sentiment and glamour, and let in the breezes of back-slapping friendship. And that would be a very happy solution of this whole cockeyed tragedy in miniature. M. H.

Neck Washing in Frosty Weather

The neck needs to be washed at least as often as the face with a good soap lather, warm water and a rough wash cloth or fairly stiff face brush. This has the double advantage of stimulating circulation while soil and scurf are removed. Even persons who take daily all-over baths, need to wash their necks frequently during the day.

Always use a fresh absorbent towel for drying and make the drying thorough to keep the skin from chapping and to prevent that rough weather-beaten look.

THE HAPPIEST hours of her life—playing with the doll house you make for her Christmas gift.

And you have fun, too, building a handsome Southern colonial mansion. Simple though it is to make, it's as like a real mansion as if it had stepped from the pages of "Gone With the Wind."

Big—goodness, yes! Five feet long, 2½ feet deep, 30 inches to top of gable. What a luxurious life a doll family can lead in its five first-floor rooms—and space to spare in the attic.

War Influencing Feminine Attire, Says Actress, Back From Paris

Madeliene Carroll Reports French Women 'Dress Down' During Day, Go Frivolous At Night to Cheer Their Men Folk

By Marshall Adams,

WHAT EFFECT is the war having on American women's dress? Is it making them feel they should "dress down" because of the tragedy abroad, or are they seeking to disseminate cheer by going blithe and frivolous in their attire?

These questions were raised through a letter from a Post reader who asked that "American women refrain from wearing the colors black and red, so prominent a fashion alliance at present, as scientists claim that black radiates 'death' and red 'hate.'" The correspondent suggested that "women instead adopt the wearing of rainbow colors which reflect the joys of life and love."

Whether this theory be sound or not is a matter of opinion. However, one first-hand speculation on the subject is advanced by Madeleine Carroll, one of the really beautiful actresses to come out of Hollywood and a recent visitor to Washington. Here is what she has to say on the subject.

Marshall Adams

Trim, Tailored Look

"Having just returned from Paris and seen the anxious faces there, it would be impossible for me to get excited over new dress foibles and frills. Of course I love the bustle and the new hats—they're charming and amusing, but belong to the entertaining evening hours—not to the daytime."

"The matter of going about one's daily work demands a new neatness and trimness from the American woman," the actress continued in her clipped English accent. "Tailored clothes reflect a mental attitude, and most women can execute a job at hand better if they are stripped of all coquetry, all unessentials. The very idea of a sily new hat makes me a little weary—it just isn't in keeping with my own subconscious thoughts about friends and family in Paris and London."

Miss Carroll herself illustrated her preference for "background" clothes. She was dressed in a chic black wool suit, workmanlike but with a gathered skirt emphazing a modified back fullness, and worn with a simple striped surah blouse. Her costume was Hollywood designed, and the flared jacket was lined in bright red crepe.

State of Mind

Asked if red and black denoted to her an "unhealthy color affinity," Miss Carroll replied that was all in the state of mind and mood, but added that surprisingly enough there was a preponderance of scarlet and black being shown abroad and in all the better shop windows throughout this country. The former British school teacher's chief reason for having taken her recent hurry-up trip to Europe was the desire to turn her Paris home into a refuge for homeless war children.

Smart French women, Miss Carroll observed, have the same philosophy as her own of "dressing down" during the day and "up" at night. "Soberness in clothes should not extend after working hours," she insisted. "No gown can be too enticing or glamorous for evening wear. The more feminine the better. Full bouffant skirts or revealing jersey and chiffon ones should create the romantic mood necessary to distract an escort's mind from his routine worries of the day. The art of drawing a husband or family out of morose speculations is a responsibility every patriotic woman should master at once."

Doris Duke, Hubby Doing the Hula Is Interesting Sight

New York, Oct. 9.

WHEN YOU see Doris Duke, or Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell, doing the hula in a New York supper club, you are beholding something, for this highly publicized, rangy blonde has always been noted for her riches, her dignity and her public reticence. And when you behold her husband, the Cromwell aforesaid, gyrating his hips in the same classic Hawaiian dance, you are seeing double in spades.

The fact remains that this spectacle was on tap a few nights ago, when Mr. Vincent Astor and Mr. Prince Serge Obolensky, entrepreneurs to the white-tie and claw-hammer coat set, changed the name of their Maisonette Russe at the classy St. Regis Hotel to the Hawaiian Maisonette, passed out leis to all the lady customers, and even to the better of the gentlemen, and unleashed three professional lady hula dancers for the delectation of the society patrons. From the Cossack dagger dance to the hula is a short hop, for these gents.

Notable among the guests at this opening halloo were those Americans who love the enchanted isles in the Pacific. Beside the Dukes, who have an elegant home there, I noted Mr. and Mrs. Topping (Mimi Baker that was); her mother, Mrs. Margaret Emerson; Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt, who sail around catching fancy fish for museums; Commander John S. Bayliss and Walter F. Dillinghams. Oh, dear, everyone was there, including our finest society dance team, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Warren Pershing. His pappy was a great officer of cavalry, a god on a horse, but Francis is just as marvelous on a dance floor with his wife.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The Paris dressmakers are making a beeline for this placid madhouse, which contains far more bums than bombs. Fourth or fifth in the transatlantic parade is Schiaparelli's right-hand woman, Hortense MacDonald. It seems very certain that most of them are going to open New York branches. One of the next to desert the Roo de la Poo may well be my old pal, Lyolene, of the famed Parisian house of Heim

Among our nicest visitors have been Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, who run the Mark Hopkins Hotel at the top of one of San Francisco's seven hills. They sat with us the other night at the Savoy Plaza where Hildegarde, the darling song stylist from Milwaukee, was giving out her little gems. They wanted to grab her for "The Top of the Mark," the most thrilling supper spot in the world, but found that she has been asked to co-star with Zorina in a forthcoming Broadway show whose book and lyrics will be written by those old masters, Dick Rodgers and Lorry Hart. So it seems that the Smiths will miss out on Hildy, alas.

Back from London has come Ethel Levey, once Mrs. George M. Cohen, once a great entertainer in the Ziegfeld days. I spent a week-end with her, and although she is missing a lot of English income, due to the war, she's still full of life and still not down to her last ruby, of which she has a fabulous set.

Your Figure, Madame!

Exercise to Take Off Weight Called The Hard Way

YOU CAN REDUCE by exercise but it's the hard way. You would have to exercise on the grand scale and count calories—the ones you burn in energy!

You could lose a pound by trotting 34 miles at the fairly brisk clip of 8 miles per hour—something you are unlikely to try! And, if you were in championship form and could swim for an hour at the speed of 2 miles per hour, you might be able to lose ⅛ of a pound.

To lose 1 pound you must burn 4,320 calories. That is no easy job. The championship swimming just mentioned uses a comparatively large number of calories—540 per hour. But few of us swim often enough to count on it.

Hourseback riding uses about 300 calories per hour. Nobody seems to mind how many the horse burns! Table tennis uses the same number—300 per hour.

Shag Energy Unchecked

Waltzing takes about 200 calories per hour, foxtrotting 215. If you should happen to be a jitterbug, you might wear yourself down considerably more. The number of calories it takes to "shag" have not been checked.

All those calorie estimates are based on the assumption that you weigh around 150 pounds, with most of your weight in active tissue.

You can figure exactly how many calories it takes to do some of the household tasks that are so tiring. Ironing uses only 87 calories per pound of body weight, per hour. That is the same number burned in typing or in washing the dishes. Work doesn't usually take as many calories as the vigorous outdoor sports.

It is much easier to count the calories in food and make your deductions in the menus. Simply by leaving off dessert, you can eliminate from 100 to 500 calories, more than you are likely to exercise off in an hour! By cutting down on all high calorie foods you can very quickly begin drawing on stored calories for one-third of your daily energy requirement. It takes no exertion to burn fat in this way.

'Just Wear Anything'

ONE of Washington's major problems—to dress or not to dress—is to be settled by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I am determined to put an end to this eternal argument over 'What shall we wear?'" Mrs. DeGoofey announced yesterday at her press conference. "This dilemma arises largely in connection with buffet suppers and those innumerable and uncertain small parties that hostesses delight in calling 'informal,' and at which you invariably find yourself in the wrong outfit and as conspicuous as if you had a scarlet letter on your breast."

"Don't you think there ought to be a law on the matter, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a publicity representative of the Woman's Forward March League.

"Indeed I do!" was the reply, "and my good friend Senator Clacker is now drawing such a bill. It will embody something for which I have long campaigned, namely that every hostess be required to tell her guests definitely in advance whether to wear long dresses or short."

Telephone Marathons To Be Eliminated

"But isn't that an infringement of freedom of dress?" asked a writer for the Nation.

"What freedom of dress do we have now?" was the retort. "If any existed, women would not have to spend the entire day preceding a party in telephoning to find out what each other was going to wear. No, it is high time that hostesses quit their silly fencing about this matter and took definite stands."

"How soon do you expect to get your bill through Congress?" asked a columnist for the Congressional Record.

"From the way Congress is now performing, it will take at least five years," was the reply. "However, I am going to take some immediate emergency measures to aid the situation."

"Why not put all the comrades in an after-six uniform?" asked a representative of the Daily Worker.

"We are getting toward that fast enough as it is," was the reply. "No, I propose to solve the immediate problem by the aid of science and particularly the cellophane and zipper industries."

At this point the famous reformer reached into a suitcase. "Just look at this beautiful pearl gray cellophane vest complete with watch chain and Phi Beta Kappa key," she said. "Now any wife can easily carry that in her handbag for her husband to don quickly at events at which he feels he should be more dressy than he is. Now here are some black cellophane tails that can be quickly zipped—or even pinned—onto a man's street coat in an emergency. I have also a white cellophane tie that fits into a billfold, and I have a collapsible rubber plug hat that may be taken from the coat pocket and donned when alighting from a taxi in front of a theater."

'Oomph' Is Added With One Zip

"But Mrs. De Goofey, what about the women?" asked a representative of Equal Rights.

"I have taken care of that," said the reformer, holding up a glistening ruffle. "This cellophane flounce" she said, "and I also have designed a train—can be quickly added to any street skirt or even tweeds by a little sleight of hand work in the bedroom. Then by adding a cellophane cigrette, the most tailored woman can instantaneously become a creature of allure."

"But what will the other guests think, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a society reporter.

"This can all be done surreptitiously," was the reply. All that is necessary is to be equipped with a pair of field glasses. Now say a man and wife are arriving in their street clothes at an event. They can alight from their car a few hundred yards distant and advance on their destination stealthily through alleys or driveways. If there are no dogs they can enter their host's yard, train their field glasses on the drawing room and ascertain what the guests are wearing. If the event is informal, they can enter—if not, they can repair behind the shrubbery and zip on their accessories."

"However, if there are dogs, or if the weather is inclement these changes can be effected in hall closets, dens, bathrooms, alcoves, pantries or other private spots that can be easily discovered by clever guests.

"May these inventions be photographed, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a representative of Vogue.

"Yes, I am giving a demonstration tonight at a party to which I have invited the press and at which I shall appear in my new cellophane ensemble."

"What shall we wear, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a fashion editor.

Lip Make-up For Photographs

Have you ever had the unpleasant experience of having your picture taken, only to have your make-up appear in the proofs as if it had been put on with a trowel? This is because red photographs black and just a touch too much lipstick spoils the effect. One well-known model, noted for her photogenic features, gives this hint about camera make-up.

She says: "Before posing, I remove all my street make-up, wiping off most of the color from my lips. I accent my eyes with shadow and mascara, powder generously, then dip my fingertips in glycerine and outline my lips. This gives my mouth contour as well as sheen and the photographic results are excellent." In this day and age of candid camera enthusiasts, this is a helpful beauty hint.

Mrs. Wright, Daughters Arrive Today From Cuba

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ARRIVING IN TOWN today will be Mrs. J. Butler Wright, wife of the American Ambassador to Cuba, and her daughters, the Misses Mary and Edith Wright. They are coming from New York, after spending the last few days at the Waldorf-Astoria.

While here, they will be at the Anchorage. Their many Washington friends are hoping they will stay long enough to enliven the lagging social calendar. Mrs. Wright, the former Harriet Rodman Southerland, daughter of the late Rear Admiral and Mrs. William N. Southerland, was quite a belle here as a debutante; and later, when her husband was in the State Department.

Miss Mary Wright, who visited here last year as the house guest of the Hungarian Minister and Mme. John Pelenyi, was honored at a number of parties. While the social picture has changed considerably this season and fetes for visitors are neither numerous nor lavish, she is certain to be widely entertained. Miss Wright made her bow at the Court of St. James's with a group that included Miss Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, and Mrs. Robert Hadow, the former Lindsay Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waddy Wood.

SPEAKING OF VISITORS—Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the American Ambassador to Belgium, also recently arrived in town. But, it seems her whereabouts are supposed to be strictly off the record. The State Department is directing her mail to her husband's office here. I called the office yesterday asking where she is staying and was told no information could be divulged.

Knowing that her daughter, Miss Nedenia Hutton, is a student at Mount Vernon Seminary, I called there and asked if Mrs. Davies was in town and had the reply, "We can give out nothing about Mrs. Davies." Well, anyway, she either is in town or has just gone; and chances are, if she's still around, you can find her at the Spring Valley home she leases for Miss Hutton.

HERE AND THERE: Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard returned yesterday afternoon from Philadelphia, where they were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bok and attended the opening concert of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra Saturday night. Mrs. Stoddard will entertain at tea, a farewell-for-awhile party, for Mr. Stoddard, who will sail next Tuesday on the Rex for Europe. Going over as a war correspondent, he also will gather material for a book, the contract for which has already been prepared.

Mrs. Stoddard has limited her guest list for tomorrow to close friends of the family. Plans for the party were made hastily, as Mr. Stoddard thought until yesterday afternoon that he might be boarding the Clipper on Saturday. Now it's definite that he will sail on the Rex, going directly to Genoa; then to visit his mother at her villa near the Brenner Pass, and then into Hungary and Rumania.

MENTION OF EUROPE reminds me—Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, who returned from France, Thursday, on the San Pedro, is now in Vermont at the bedside of her mother, who is seriously ill. Miss Katherine McKeiver, who accompanied Mrs. Keyes to Europe, returned with her and the two were at the Commodore Hotel on Friday. Miss McKeiver will be back in Washington today. Mrs. Keyes is not expected to arrive here until October 15.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: Coolest place in Washington yesterday was the Senate chamber. When I stopped by there a few minutes after noon, the galleries were packed. Most interested spectator in the reserved section was Mrs. Sheridan Downey, who never took her eyes off her husband while he was speaking. Mrs. Morris Sheppard was another in the audience. Mrs. D. Worth Clark, who later was lunching with Mrs. Raymond Clapper; Mrs. McCeney Werlich, who arrived alone; and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, who were luncheon guests of Mrs. Downey following the Senator's speech.

The Smiths left for New York last night, where they will spend several days. Accompanying them to Washington the latter part of the week will be Judge and Mrs. Samuel Clark.

The engagement was made known to a few friends at tea Sunday afternoon, when Judge and Mrs. Arundell entertained at tea in their home at 4390 Quebec street northwest.

The bride-elect attended St. Margaret's School here and Mary Baldwin College. More recently, she was a student at the Critcher Art School. Mr. Keller, widely known both in Washington and in West Virginia, is a lawyer.

Mrs. Thomas Bolling Byrd, of Kentmere, Boyce, Va., has gone to Detroit, Mich., to visit her father, Sidney Miller. Mrs. Byrd's daughter, Miss Lucy Mitchell, entered Foxcroft School this season, and her son, Billy Mitchell, jr., is attending St. Alban's School.

Mrs. Cornelius Rathborne, of Long Island, who returned from a visit to Scotland two weeks ago with Mr. Rathborne, came to Long Branch, Millwood, to see her mother, Mrs. Prescott Hudekoper, and her grandmother, Mrs. Hugh Nelson.

MEMBERS OF THE Blue Ridge hunt have elected—at the request of their master, William Bell Watkins—Graham Dougherty, of Berryville, as joint master. This will relieve Mr. Watkins of a great deal of the work that he has put on the hunt for a number of years. He is well known as an M. F. H. who hunts his own hounds and one who has given great sport to his fields for years. Cub-hunting is under way with the Blue Ridge Hunt and everything points to a fine season.

Among those following hounds Saturday morning were Miss Jane Brooks, of Lake Forrest, Ill., who will spend the winter in Virginia, where she has taken a hunting box near Millwood; Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, Miss Gwynne Harrison, Mrs. Billy Jacobs Wetherall, Capt. Ewart Johnston, George Greenhalgh, jr., A. A. Baldwin and George Burwell.

ERNEST REDMON entertained at a luncheon Sunday in honor of Miss Isabella Grandin, of Boston, who is spending a week at Welbourne for the hunting. Among guests was Dr. Thomas Neill, of Washington, who was spending the week-end at his Virginia farm near Middleburg. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. T. Walker Fred and Dr. Archibald Cary Randolph. Mr. Redmon entertained his guests after luncheon by showing his string of famous horses.

Miss Lalias Janney, of Leesburg, will entertain the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club for tea at her home Wednesday, at 3 p. m.

Navy's Cooper Twins Together Here Again

Mrs. Hustvedt Visiting Her Sister, Mrs. Pine; Both to Go to Boston

"The irrepressible Cooper twins," as they are known in Navy circles, are together once again.

Commander and Mrs. James M. Pine have as guest at their home on Idaho avenue Mrs. Pine's twin sister, Mrs. Hustvedt, wife of Capt. Olaf M. Hustvedt, U. S. N.

The former Irene and Ysabel Cooper are known far and wide for their hospitality and charm. Born and reared in Honolulu they are the daughters of the late Judge Henry E. Cooper, who ranked high in territorial affairs in the islands. They were then, and are yet, so much alike that one always was being taken for the other. Married at 17 they have been "tagging the Navy" ever since, as they express it.

Thursday Mrs. Pine and Mrs. Hustvedt will go to Boston to visit another sister, Mrs. George W. Bailey, author and lecturer, Alice Cooper Bailey, as she is known professionally, is an authority on Robert Louis Stevenson's stay in Hawaii and in the South Seas.

Capt. and Mrs. Hustvedt are well known in Washington, having served several tours of duty here. They own a home on Ordway street which is leased for the time being as they have been away for more than a year. At present Capt. Hustvedt is doing sea duty.

Mrs. Hustvedt has been living in California ports since she left Washington. Joining her sister in the West for summer, Mrs. Pine brought her back East when she returned. Accompanying Mrs. Hustvedt to the Capital were her two sons, one of whom is in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology while the other has enrolled in St. Alban's.

The twins visited their sister, Mrs. Bailey, earlier in the summer at Boston. This trip will be short as they plan to return to the Capital the middle of next week.

Miss V. M. Wall Becomes Bride

At an informal ceremony yesterday afternoon in St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Miss Verna V. Wall, daughter of Mrs. George Herbert Wall and the late Mr. Wall, became the bride of Woodrow W. Peacock, son of Mrs. Howard Peacock and the late Mr. Peacock, of Odessa, Mo. The Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony. Walton Nash played the nuptial music.

The bride was given in marriage by George I. Cartner. She wore a mosque green crepe street dress with brown accessories. With it she wore a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley, and a gold cross and chain, a gift of the bridegroom.

Sharlet Marice and Alma Martin were the wedding attendants. When the couple left for their wedding trip the bride was wearing a suit of burnt sugar shade Julliard wool with beaver jacket and brown accessories. They will be at home in Washington after October 15.

Miss Wall received her education in Massena, N. Y., where she lived with her grandmother, Mrs. W. B. Raymond, after her father's death in 1925. She later attended St. Faith's School for girls at Saratoga Springs. Mr. Peacock attended Central Missouri Teachers College at Warrensburg, Mo.

D. C. Notables See Opening of Hayes Play Here

Ladies and Gentlemen of Capital society were very much on hand last night when Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale gave their portrayal of "Ladies and Gentlemen" at the National Theater.

Boxes and orchestra seats were filled with social notables, who left dinner parties early to be in place before the first curtain. Official and residential society, with a scattering of diplomats, were in the audience, which was a highly representative cross-section of Washington.

To mention but a few seen in the audience—there was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims, of the British Embassy, arriving with Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse; the former Attorney General Homer S. Cumming; the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Cugia, an inveterate first-nighter; Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, with Mrs. George R. Holmes; Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr.

Others in the crowd were Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr.; Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, with a party in her box; Mr. and Mrs. T. Sim Lee, Mrs. Abner Drury, with her niece, Miss Patricia Kyle; Mr. and Mrs. William Shearer, Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Mrs. McKenney Mallan, and others.

Gen. Littles To Receive At Reception

Members of Mess At Quantico Will Welcome Them

The Commanding General of the Marine Corps Base, Quantico, and Mrs. Louis MacCarty Little will receive Quantico officers and their families of the officers' club on Thursday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at a welcome reception given by members of the mess, Col. Julian C. Smith, president of the officers' mess, and Mrs. Smith will be in the receiving line with Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Little.

Guests invited from Washington include the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Col. A. A. Vandegrift, assistant commandant, and Mrs. Vandegrift; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. D. C. McDougal; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. C. Beaumont, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell Putnam, Brig. Gen. E. A. Ostermann, Col. and Mrs. H. L. Larsen, and Col. and Mrs. Selden Kennedy.

Gen. and Mrs. Little recently moved into Quarters I at Quantico and are being greeted with more than usual cordiality by members of the command. Those who have served with the Littles at foreign stations, at Washington, and at San Diego, speak as enthusiastically of Mrs. Little's graciousness and her interesting personality, as of the general's military achievements and athletic accomplishments. Mrs. Little, as Elsie Cobb Wilson, formerly owned interior decorating shops in Washington and New York.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHEN THE CHINESE first invented the calling card many centuries ago, they certainly started something. Of all the institutions which make Washington different from most cities, none is more venerable than the ancient and honorable one of card-leaving.

As sure a sign of a party here as the tinkling of a cocktail shaker is the presence in somebody's front hall of a bowl piled high with little engraved pasteboards whose numbers usually reach such proportions that they spill over sloppily on the table and floor below. Thousands and thousands of these cards are scattered indiscriminately about the Capital every season; everybody rails about the system, but, as Mark Twain once remarked about the weather, nobody does anything about it.

THE MOST PITIABLE victims of the calling system are the chatelaines of embassies and legations. People who want to be in on Washington glamor have heard that leaving a card at these places is the way to get a great big engraved invitation to a great big plushy party. With some embassies, this works, but not with all, and many card leavers who drive through handsome gates in battered jalopies and leap up marble stairs to deliver their cards remain frustrated.

That great democratic institution, the White House, however, makes a real effort to ask Washington card-scatterers to one of the series of gigantic musicales given during winter afternoons, and usually succeeds. But anyone can see the White House any morning during visiting hours without leaving a pasteboard in advance.

A NEWCOMER, uninitiated in the wondrous ways of the Capital, who finds left at her door the card of an ambassadress is quite apt innocently to think that the lady has been there in person. This is because she does not know that the calling system here is about as mechanical and unsentimental as anything can be, and that ambassadresses leave most of it to their social secretaries.

Leave a card at an embassy or legation, and automatically the next day, usually, one of theirs come back to you. In past years the British Embassy sent theirs around in a station wagon. Some chiefs of mission hire Western Union messengers to make their rounds, paying them at 5 cents a card, and requesting that they please wash their hands first. Or if the diplomats think a bicycle not chic enough for the errand boys, the company will supply a car. Cards may arrive at any odd hour. Though the calling hour is theoretically from 4 to 6, a friend of ours was awakened at midnight the other evening by a man leaving a pasteboard from a legation here.

WHEN a foreign envoy arrives in Washington to assume his duties, his first few weeks are apt to be devoted to a whirl of calls, according to a rather complicated system of protocol. First, of course, comes the presentation of his credentials to the President, then, if he has a wife, and he can catch Mrs. Roosevelt in town, they go to see her. Next come the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull and Vice President and Mrs. Garner, but as the Garners are such busy people, it's difficult to see them in person, the envoy simply drops cards at the Washington Hotel. Next on his list are the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Bankhead and the Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes. Some envoys make a personal visit to members of the Cabinet as well.

If the envoy is an ambassador, he drops notes to the other chiefs of mission saying he has arrived, but can limit his calls only to his fellow ambassadors. But the poor ministers are supposed to drop in on every ambassador as well as those of their own rank. As There are some 50 listed in the blue book (though the number is dwindling every year) this is a chore which takes weeks.

THE GERMANS were the first nation of the Western world to adopt calling cards, which caught on there quickly in the sixteenth century. From Germany the custom spread to France, where the elegant court of Louis XIV seemed to find it very apropos and added many embellishments. By the time Louis XV ruled, people were going berserk about calling cards, making them enormous affairs, frequently with landscapes painted on them and their signatures copied beneath. England adopted cards in the eighteenth century, and then society everywhere.

Card leaving is said to be dying out in New York and most other American cities, but the Washington society leader is still showered with the pasteboards, and the end is not yet in sight.

Latin American Peace Delegates Visit Hull, Who Stresses Need for Co-operation

Mrs. Duggan Is Chairman at Luncheon Fete

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Women's will for peace is being given concrete expression in the current visit of representatives of seven Latin American republics, here on a six weeks' good-will tour, sponsored by the People's Mandate Committee to End War. Official welcome was extended to the delegates yesterday morning by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and by the women of the Capital at a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel and later at a tea given by the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women.

In the delegation yesterday were Senorita Susana Perez Irigoyen, of Argentina; Senora Lucia de Paula Fonseca, of Brazil; Senora Angela Acuna de Chacon, of Costa Rica; Senorita Mercedes Guerra, of Cuba, and Senorita Yvonne Gonzales Rincones, of Venezuela. Senora Anita Gernandi de Alvarez-Calderon, of Lima, Peru, plans to join the group in San Francisco, and Senora Rosa Marcos de Ycaza, wife of the Ecuadorean consul general at San Francisco, representing her country, will be here to start West with the others on Thursday night.

Secretary Hull expressed confidence that the good-will tour would strengthen friendly relations between the Americas and emphasized the importance of such cooperation between the American republics as has been undertaken in the recent Panama conference and those held in other years.

After being received by Secretary Hull, the visitors went to the office of Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, chief of the passport division of the State Department, and were served coffee. Later they were taken to the Social Security Board, where Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward received them and explained the operation of this agency.

Mrs. Duggan Arranges Luncheon

Mrs. Laurence Duggan, wife of the chief of the Division of American Republics of the State Department, was chairman of the luncheon at which Mrs. Hull, honorary chairman of the committee of sponsors for the good-will tour, was ranking guest. Among others at the head table, in addition to members of the delegation, were Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the mandate committee, who made arrangements of the tour; Senora de Espil, wife of the Ambassador of Argentina; Senora de Garland, wife of the Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy; Senora de Baron, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy; Senora de Guimares, wife of the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Senora de Crespo, wife of the First Secretary of the Ecuadorean Embassy, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Regret was expressed at the absence, because of illness, of Mrs. Thomas Burke, wife of the chief of the division of international communications of the State Department and mandate chairman of the committee for Latin America. Mrs. Burke, who is a Chilean by birth and was a member of the Mandate Committee's good-will flight to South America two years ago, has had an important part in plans for receiving the present delegation and had expected to accompany it on the Western tour.

Miss Vernon introduced the visitors, each of whom spoke in English. Senora de Chacon presented Miss Vernon a scroll bearing the signatures of members of the Feministe League of Costa Rica.

All the women were attractive. All were ready to tell of the cultural and scientific progress in their countries as well as to learn of that in the United States. Senorita Irigoyen, of the staff of La Nacion, is one of the most striking members of the party; short, vivacious, always hatless, and keenly interested in everything about her.

Many Prominent Women Attend

A few among the many prominent women at the luncheon yesterday were Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner, who lived seven years in South America; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; Miss Mary Winslow, Dr. Irene A. Wright, of the State Department; Mrs. Blair Banister, Assistant United States Treasurer; Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt, Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau; Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Mrs. Woodward, Miss Dorothy Detzer, of the International League for Peace and Feedom; Mrs. Concha Romero James, of the Pan America Union; Miss Gwladys Jones, international secretary of the Quota Club; Miss Mary Sigman, president of the local Zonta Club; Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Jeter Horton and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair.

Mrs. John Donaldson, who was chairman of the tea given for the delegates at the A. A. U. W., was among those at the luncheon. She was assisted by Miss Stella Risley Clemence, of the hospitality committee, and Mrs. Lelia H. Cornish. Receiving with them were Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the Washington Branch, and Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, first vice president. Alternating at the tea table were Miss Mary Anderson, Dr. Irene Wright, Miss Elsie Brown, Dr. Esther Caulkin Brunnauer, Mrs. Harold Fowler, Miss Maxine Girts, Mrs. J. Austin Stone and Mrs. David L. Wing.

Full Program Scheduled Today

Last night, the visitors were entertained at dinners given by their embassies and one at which Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins entertained. This morning they will visit Mount Vernon, stop at the Little Tea House for refreshments, with Miss Gertrude Crocker as hostess, and be guests of honor at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel. Visits to the Department of Agriculture, where they will be received by Secretary Wallace, and the Public Health Service, where Dr. Thomas Parran will greet them, will follow. There will be a reception at 5.30 at the Brazilian Embassy and a buffet supper at the Sulgrave Club at which Representative Caroline O'Day will be hostess.

Child Labor Fight Reviewed

The fight against child labor has by no means been won in this country, although there is marked progress, Courtney Dinwiddie, executive secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, told members of the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday. Addressing the Monday luncheon, he traced history of the campaign against child labor.

There are still 800,000 children of less than 16 years of age in industry, he said. This represents a substantial reduction from the peak of 1,995,000 in 1910.

He also discussed plight of migratory workers, who, he said, are not seeking relief but employment as they follow the harvests, but need protection of law.

Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the club, presided at the luncheon and Mrs. Thomas S. Settle introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Spitzer Addresses Jewish Women's Meeting

Mrs. Harry Roller in Charge of Mid-Atlantic States Conference, Being Held at the Washington Hotel

Women can make a definite contribution to democracy through social service and seeking to combat racial and cultural intolerance, Mrs. Benjamin Spitzer, of New York, chairman of the executive board of the National Council of Jewish Women, told delegates to the Mid-Atlantic States Conference yesterday. The conference sessions, which are being held at the Washington Hotel, are in charge of Mrs. Harry Roller, District chairman.

Mrs. Spitzer urged the women to study unemployment, housing and education in their communities, with a view to giving support to corrective measures. She declared the seeds of influences destructive to our democratic form of government were scattered where unemployment, want and degrading environment sapped the morale.

This year marks the thirty-fifth anniversary of the council, which has maintained an active program of community service since it was founded and has carried on international work.

Mrs. Edward Sonneborn presided at the opening luncheon yesterday. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation, offered the opening prayer. The afternoon session was presided over by Mrs. Simon Sobeloff, of Baltimore, national president of the council.

Officers Present Annual Reports

Officers who reported, in addition to the president, were: Mrs. Fred Rypens, of Greensboro, N. C., first vice president; Mrs. Samuel Bowman, of Richmond, and Mrs. Samuel Strouse, of Baltimore. Miss Rose Lee Pearlman, of Charleston, S. C., president of the Mid-Atlantic Conference Council of Juniors, also reported, as did the section presidents.

These included Mrs. Sonneborn, for Washington; Mrs. Joseph Koffler, Alexandria; Mrs. Henry Legum, Newport News; Mrs. Alvin Margolius, Norfolk; Mrs. J. H. Lavenstein, Petersburg; Mrs. Moe Glazer, Portsmouth; Mrs. Philip Strause, Richmond; Mrs. S. H. Rogovin, Asheville; Mrs. Milton Zauber, Greensboro; Mrs. Sam Tobias, High Point; Mrs. Ernest Neiman, Raleigh; Mrs. Moses Shapiro, Winston-Salem; Mrs. Bernard Legum, Annapolis; Mrs. Jacob Dashew, Baltimore, and Miss Jeanette Weinberg, Frederick.

In the afternoon, there will be an institute on service to the foreign born, at which Mrs. Sobeloff will preside, followed by a discussion of "The Refugee Situation in America," by Harry Greenstein, of Baltimore, of the National Refugee Service.

This evening, the council and District 8 or the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods will have a joint banquet at the Mayflower, with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., as guest of honor. Mrs. Alexander Wolf, second vice president of the national council, will act as toastmistress.

Two Washington Refugees Find Ideal Way Out of Europe Through Greece

IF YOU ARE a war refugee, faced with the problem of getting home from Europe, go to Athens—the Greeks have a ship for it. That's what two fortunate Washingtonians decided to do and they found it was the ideal way out.

Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Miss Elsa Peterson, both prominent members of the board of the Y. W. C. A., spent the summer together in Europe and were in Yugoslavia when war was declared—the war of which they had heard rumors, but which people in that section seemed to feel would not actually come. After keeping the wires hot, to find out where they could secure reservations, they received the welcome news there was a cabin with a private bath available on the new Greek ship, Neshallas, sailing from Athens September 24. They engaged passage with two other friends, Miss Mary Phille, of California, and Miss Harriett B. Johnson, of New York, went to Athens on a comfortable train, spent several enjoyable days there and had a delightful trip home. Heretofore the Greeks have not had good passenger service, says Mrs. Parker, but the Neshallas was perfect.

She remained in New York and then took a motor trip through Virginia before returning to Washington last week-end.

TRITE, BUT TRUE, the old saying aboue the size of our worried little world bobbed up again yesterday at the luncheon given by the People's Mandate Committee in honor of the goodwill delegation of South American women. Mrs. A. M. Fox, whose husband, a member of the U. S. Tariff Commission, is now in Caracas, Venezuela, found herself seated beside Mme. Pedro Manuel Arcaya, wife of the former Minister of Venezuela to this country. Mme. Arcaya, who came to this country to enroll her daughter in Vassar College, sails for home Friday, and, of course, takes a first-hand message to Mr. Fox from his wife, whom she had never met before yesterday's luncheon.

THE WASHINGTON DELEgation to the fall conference of Phi Delta Gamma, national fraternity for graduate women (held Saturday and Sunday in Bedford, Pa.) had a decidedly "national complexion. It included Mrs. J. Emmett Sebree, national president; Mrs. Frederick Crocker, assistant editor of the National Journal, and Miss Mary Pendelton, past national president, accompanied by Miss Grace Gowens, Alpha Chapter president, and Mrs. Harold E. Werner, a member of Alpha.

THE C. A. R.'s as well as the D. A. R.'s will be represented by their national president today and tomorrow at the first of the golden jubilee celebrations of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. It will be the presentation of a portrait of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, a founder of the D. A. R., to the museum maintained in the Harrison mansion.

Washington women who are there to attend the ceremonies are: Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president; Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, national recording secretary, and Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, national organizing secretary. Each will speak briefly at the program this afternoon.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, president general of the D. A. R., is guest of honor at the State D. A. R. convention, in connection with which the presentation will be made.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, honorary national president of the C. A. R., is now on an extended trip to Australia and the Fiji Islands, from which she will return October 30. She expects to stop in California, Nevada and Texas to attend meetings of the society on her way to her home in New York.

VASHTI BURR WHITTINGTON, national president of the Woman's Professional Panhellenic Association, which will have its convention here the last week in October, will tell about convention plans tonight, when she addresses the first fall meeting of Eta Alumnae Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi. Although she is one of the "top flight" members of Phi Delta Delta, another international legal sorority, the Kappas are looking forward to having her as their guest tonight.

Mrs. Clare Willison will also speak, describing the international convention of Kappa Beta Pi, to which she was the chapter's delegate in Estes Park last summer—or is it still this summer?—according to both calendar and thermometer, I guess it is.

Ohio Girls' Club Plans Luncheon

The first meeting of the literary group of the Ohio Girls' Club will be a luncheon Saturday in the South building, Department of Agriculture. An informal discussion of summer reading by members will make up the program. Miss Grace Weed, chairman, will preside.

A special study of Ohio authors is to be an interesting feature of the programs planned for the year. Members will secure material for study from the Ohioana Library, in Columbus, Ohio, a distinctive collection of books by Ohio authors. Miss Nellie Jennings, Ohioana librarian, will cooperate with Miss Mary Fausnaugh, chairman of the program committee.

Miss Louise Freed, secretary of the group, Miss Alice Wolfe and Miss Rosanna Robuck are other members of the program committee.

To Meet Thursday

The National Woman's Club will have its first fall meeting Thursday at the Highlands. It will be a luncheon at which the president, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, will preside.

Alpha Phi to Observe Its 67th Anniversary

The sixty-seventh anniversary of the founding of Alpha Phi International Fraternity will be celebrated tonight when the Washington alumnae and active chapters meet for buffet supper at the home of Miss Ida Jeanne Dagger in Arlington, Va.

The fraternity, which this year honors Frances E. Willard, an early president, was founded at Syracuse University, October 10, 1872.

Where to Put Price Agency Bothers U. S.

Consumers' Council Expected to Halt War-Born Increases

By Alfred Friendly

A drive to remove the Consumers Council Division from the Department of Agriculture to help the Government combat a war-born runaway price rise by placing it elsewhere is being seriously considered and widely approved among top New Deal planners. It is doomed to almost certain failure, however, because of the practical matter of where to put the council.

The objective, which has been discussed with the President and enjoys his approval, is to make the council an effective agent to keep consumers throughout the country advised on the trend of prices, giving them information on which increases are healthful, which unjustified, which speculative.

It also would act as a reporting agency, recording the economically important factor of consumer sentiment on price and living cost conditions.

The result, it is believed, would be the growth of a strong pressure group, acting through the hundreds of voluntary local consumers' committees throughout the country, that would tend to prevent speculative price rises, bring into the open unjustified cost changes, keep the Government informed of non-competitive, monopolistic conditions and anti-trust violations and serve to check what may develop into a huge jump in the cost of living as a result of the European war.

Location Is Difficulty

The difficulty with the present consumers council, according to those advocating its removal, is its location. As part of the Agriculture Department, the council must often tread on the toes of the farmers' immediate interest in cases where the farmer acts as producer instead of consumer. The deadlocked situation results not from a conflict of personalities, but only because of the inherent contradictions of the two agencies.

New Dealers talking about the change are agreed that the man to head up any new consumer unit should be the present Consumers Council director, Donald E. Montgomery. They further agree that to place the agency in either the Commerce or Labor Departments would create problems identical to those now existing in Agriculture.

The question then rises, where else to put it. Congressional action would be necessary to establish a consumers' unit as a separate entity. Even the most hopeful do not look for this development.

Other locations discussed and discarded are the Federal Security Agency, where a consumers' unit would not be particularly appropriate; the Justice Department, which is charged with prosecution of law violations; the Federal Trade Commission and the President's executive office, also unsuited to take a consumers' organization.

Price Rise Awaited

The whole proposal probably will remain in only a "talking" stage unless and until a skyrocketting price boom convinces consumers they are being harmed, and inspires them to insist on a separate Government agency.

The United Federal Workers threaten to "consider" taking the Morton Friedman case to the President or an arbitration board unless Friedman, president of the WPA local of the union, is rehired by tomorrow.

Friedman, dismissed in the summer's termination wave, was made the center of a case alleging anti-union discrimination. Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody reviewed the case and found no evidence of discrimination, but promised that if there was a job available, Friedman would be given it. The union claims that WPA shows no disposition to live up to the promise. Yesterday Carmody said that the promise still stands, but that if the union wants to take the step, he would welcome a review of the case before arbiters.

Lewis Hints CIO May Fight NLRB

toward solution" of unemployment, which he said must be solved "if we are to justify the effectiveness of our democracy; of our vaunted leadership in the economic field."

"The past year has seen a substantial halt in any steps toward a progressive economic program," Lewis said. ". . . Meanwhile, the national economy is sliding into a most serious condition. It is now clear that it is possible for the most important part of American industry to operate with a substantial and wholly satisfactory profit in the face of a national unemployment of 12,000,000 workers. . . .

"It is now no longer worth their (employers) while to seek a program to re-employ these workers. Their only concern now is to see that the care of the unemployed constitutes as small a burden as possible upon industry."

Unemployment cannot be solved by a war boom, he said, in stressing labor's concern that the United States keep out of war.

"Rather than a war boom, with all the injustices and evils that arise out of it, labor wants a solid and stable prosperity, based upon the kind of fundamental economic readjustments that will last."

Member Hits NLRB

The National Labor Relations Board was assailed from within its own ranks and from Capitol Hill yesterday.

Dr. William H. Leiserson, recently appointed to the Board by President Roosevelt, accused the two other members of exceeding their legal authority to aid the CIO's Newspaper Guild in a Boston decision.

The special House Committee appointed to investigate the NLRB called on police officials throughout the country for reports on strikes and disturbances, and activities of NLRB representatives.

Dr. Leiserson charged the two other members of the Board, Chairman J. Warren Madden and Edwin S. Smith, made an "arbitrary" decision in ordering an election within 30 days among editorial, commercial, building management and certain composing room employes of the Boston Globe newspaper company to determine whether they want to be represented for collective bargaining by the Guild.

They ordered all the employes should be grouped as one unit, though guild representatives admitted at a hearing they lacked a majority in the commercial department.

"The order in the majority decision," Dr. Leiserson said, "is a mere device for enabling the Guild to secure the right to represent employes in the commercial departments, even though a majority of the commercial employes do not desire such representation."

A. F. L. Answers Roosevelt

Cincinnati, Oct. 9 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor today reaffirmed its "open door" policy on labor peace and declared in diplomatic language future White House appeals for unity should be addressed to the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations, now in convention at San Francisco.

The convention action was a formal answer to President Roosevelt's peace message delivered last week.

In the midst of its consideration, the convention put on a noisy demonstration as Joseph N. Weber, ailing head of the Musicians' Union, arose to repudiate an attack on the New Deal by Chauncey Weaver, a Musicians' Union delegate.

Weaver told the convention he was not impressed with the Roosevelt labor peace message and declared: "The President is for solidarity. Why doesn't he solidify the Democratic Party?"

Boos mingled with applause as he concluded. But a roar of approval followed when Weber served notice that Weaver was not speaking for the A. F. L. or the union.

Daniel J. Tobin, close friend of the President and long an outspoken advocate of labor unity, warned the A. F. L.'s position on peace terms should not be inflexible.

Tobin, who bosses the 350,000 members of the teamsters' union, said the outlook for peace was a "dismal picture," adding: "You know the tide has begun to turn against the trade union movement of our country. . . . If we cannot see the handwriting on the wall, then we are not the kind of leaders who should lead the people depending upon us."

Social Council Approves Plan For 'TB' Cases

Convalescent Care Of Colored Children Backed by Agencies

A plan for providing convalescent care for District colored children by requesting the Tuberculosis Association to enlarge facilities of the Bold Eagle Hill Camp, was approved yesterday by the Council of Social Agencies, meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

Convalescent care is cheaper than hospitalization, and more beneficial to the patient, Dr. P. A. McLendon, pediatrician on the staff of Children's Hospital, pointed out. Hospital wards are crowded with patients who could be sent to a convalescent home, at a cost half as great, if such care were available, he said.

The District's high death rate and other serious health problems would be brought under control in a few years if the Health Department is granted an adequate budget, Dr. Halberd C. Dunn, chief of the division of vital statistics, Bureau of the Census, told the council.

Health officials, at first inclined to think the District's death rate could be explained by nonresidents coming to Washington for medical treatment, have discovered that such is not the case, said Dr. Dunn.

"The nonresidents who come into the District are balanced by the District residents treated outside the District," he stated.

He cited the need of the establishment of a health center in the northwest section, the area contributing a high percentage of hospital admissions, and spoke of the importance of a mental hygiene service in the District.

Dies to Call Six From D. C. Navy Yard

legedly seized at Communist headquarters did not refer to public school teachers of Washington.

Asserting that the reference was to private school teachers and others engaged in special educational projects, Voorhis said that "I think it is extremely important to point out that the Washington Teachers Union, Local 8, of the American Federation of Teachers, has led an aggressive fight against the Communists and the Nazis."

Documents Described

However, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said he was making an inquiry into the charges. "We expect every teacher to be loyal and believe they are loyal," Ballou stated.

"We have never discharged anyone for disloyalty," he declared, "but we have refused to pass people for appointment in the school system, because their credentials, so far as patriotism was concerned, didn't look good to us."

The document describing Communist organization work among school teachers, Navy Yard employes and other local groups was said by Dies to have been identified as genuine by Chancey, who appeared before the committee Friday.

In a letter to the Attorney General yesterday, Chancy asserted that "I definitely stated I could not identify" the document. He said Dies "put into my mouth statements I never made."

Protesting "star-chamber" procedure in excluding the public from his hearing, Chancey accused the committee of desiring "to build up an air of secrecy about nonexistent, mysterious subversive activities of the Communists in the Navy Yard, the G. P. O. and elsewhere."

Charges Raid Illegal

Chancey charged that committee agents raided local Communist offices illegally and forced witnesses to appear before the committee without previous warning. He asked Murphy for an investigation by the civil liberties division of the Department of Justice of "this ominous development."

The Navy Yard employes who are to receive subpenas today will probably be asked to appear at an open committee hearing tomorrow, along with local officials of the Communist Party.

It is understood that the names of the alleged Communists in the Navy Yard were obtained from a Government Printing Office employe. The committee obtained the names at an executive hearing yesterday.

Dies, whose office was broken into early Sunday morning, said yesterday, "It is ridiculous to think that the House Office Building was so poorly protected at this critical time. Government property ought to be guarded by experienced police and not by the patronage boys."

But Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms and chairman of the Capitol Police Board, replied the Capitol police, with 148 men divided into three shifts, are "short-handed." Lieut. Roy Brown, of the Capitol Police, said he saw no way of preventing office-breaking "as long as the building remains open to the public."

Campaign Described

At the open hearing of the committee yesterday, Kenneth Goff, former officer of the Young Communist League, described how Communists attempted to penetrate into a wide variety of organizations, including the Young Democratic clubs and the C. I. O.

Goff told the committee the Communist Party and Young Communist League had profited from the connection between the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the American Youth Congress, which the witness said was Communist-dominated.

In 1937, the President sent greetings to William E. Hinckley, head of the congress, said Goff, and last year Mrs. Roosevelt entertained Hinckley and other officers at tea. The witness charged Hinckley and two or three others among Mrs. Roosevelt's tea guests were Communists.

The greetings from President Roosevelt "helped us a lot," observed Goff, adding that the letter and the tea party were used "to show the respectability" of the Youth Congress. He said "we could tell people about that" in persuading them to join such "front organizations."

It was pointed out that numerous Senators and Representatives also sent greetings to the Youth Congress, and Dies observed, "why, the Communists are able to deceive the cleverest people."

In his letter, President Roosevelt said that "the American Youth Congress has . . . the good will and the best wishes of all who are concerned with the future of American democracy."

Goff testified that the Youth Congress was under "complete control" of the Communists.

Attempted penetration of Young Democratic clubs was indicated in a memorandum to the Young Communist League, made after a National Young Democratic rally at Seattle in July, 1938. In this report, it urged "every party and Young Communist League" group should begin to help develop the Young Democrats as a progressive "mass organization."

Goff, a blond young man 25 years old, who told the committee he intended to resign from the Communist Party and the league at the conclusion of his testimony, said that Communist leaders consider the C. I. O. "virtually the backbone of the Communist Party in America." He said the party wants to build up the C. I. O. "as a militant front of labor."

Besides the Youth Congress, Goff mentioned as organizations which the party or Young Communist League have more or less successfully penetrated, the Workers Alliance, American Student Union, Southern Negro Youth Congress, the Commonwealth Federation of Washington (State), American Jewish Congress, Labor's Nonpartisan League (which he described as "one of the children of the party"), committees to aid Austrian and Spanish refugees, and the Progressive Party.

The American League for Peace and Democracy, whose local offices were recently raided by committee agents with the help of Washington police, is "a Communist organization and so understood by Communists throughout the country," testified Goff.

Piney Branch Citizens Ask Street Work

Sidewalks Sought Along Iowa and Arkansas Avenues By Association

A program for improvement of street, sidewalk and sewer facilities in the Piney Branch section was inaugurated at a meeting of the Piney Branch Citizens Association last night. Progress in a long fight for expansion and repair of educational institutions in the section also was reported.

Members petitioned the District for construction of sidewalks along Iowa avenue from Decatur to Thirteenth street, and along Arkansas avenue from Decatur to Sixteenth street northwest. Repair of sidewalks, broken in many places, was asked.

Installation of traffic lights or stop signs at the intersections of Decatur street with Iowa avenue, Arkansas avenue and Fourteenth street was also asked, as the unit was notified by the District Engineering Department that 60 candlepower street lamps would be replaced by 250 candlepower lamps on Emerson and Farragut streets between Thirteenth and Fourteenth.

It also was announced the Sewer Department would "very shortly" begin enlargement of the Arkansas avenue sewer from Sixteenth to Taylor streets.

A letter from the Board of Education was read, informing the association appropriations for a new stage in the Macfarland Junior High School auditorium, construction of a dugout in the athletic field, and repairs to the roof, would be sought in the next District budget.

The association renewed its request for construction of a normal school on a site at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest to replace Wilson Teachers College

Kalorama

Kalorama Citizens Association urged President Roosevelt to appoint a local attorney to the vacant judgeship in the District Court, and indorsed the recruiting campaign of the District National Guard, after hearing a talk by a Guard representative.

Recent robberies of passersby at the downtown end of Taft Bridge were discussed. The secretary was instructed to write to the National Capital Parks Commission requesting that an iron fence be placed in front of the bushes on each side of Connecticut avenue, said to provide hiding places for footpads.

Miss Sibyl Baker discussed the plans and problems of the new recreation department at the meeting, which was augmented by visitors from other organizations. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Monie Sanger were re-elected delegates to the federation.

West End

West End Citizens Association re-elected W. F. Wasson president, and elected William R. Brown treasurer for his twenty-sixth term. Other officers are J. F. Kelley, first vice president; Robert H. Lyons, re-elected second vice president; Paul Sweet, third vice president; A. M. Cooper and W. F. Wasson, delegates to the federation.

The association indorsed the recruiting campaign of the National Guard. It instructed the president to write a letter of sympathy to the retiring delegate to the federation, Grover Ayers, who is ill.

National Gateway

Paving of the 2200 block of S street northeast and an alley connecting Douglas and Channing streets in the 3100 block, was urged at a meeting of the National Gateway Citizens Association. Participation of the association in the Roll Call was asked by a Red Cross speaker, who described activities and history of the organization.

Members complained of excessive noise from train whistles at the Langdon substation. Everett Evans was elected delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Twelve new members were elected.

Park View

Park View Citizens Association adopted a resolution requesting the Department of Community Centers and Playgrounds to keep the school playgrounds open at least three nights a week.

Due to efforts by the association to obtain a traffic light at Sherman avenue, Park road and New Hampshire avenue, it was reported, the signal is to be installed. The sponsorship of Troop 49 of the Boy Scouts of America was undertaken.

Information was received that 15 new street cars will be placed in operation on Georgia avenue beginning October 15.

Southeast Businessmen

Southeast Businessmen's Association recommended District Attorney David Pine to fill the vacancy on the District Court bench. District Commissioners were commended in their selection of Edward Dent for assessor.

Completion of the Buchanan School playground, Thirteenth and E streets southeast, was urged. More traffic lights are needed on "blind corners" in the southeast section, the association said.

Hermit Dentist Found Dead in Office-Home

Dr. Homer E. Wood, a dentist who pursued his profession, lived, ate and slept in a small fourth-floor office of the Loew Building on F street northwest, was found dead in his room yesterday.

Friends in the building judged he was "about 50 years old." They knew only he had been here "for at least 20 years."

Tucker Heads Northeast Unit For 46th Year

Evan H. Tucker last night unanimously was re-elected president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association for the forty-sixth consecutive year at a meeting in the Ludlow School, Sixth and G streets northeast. Roscoe Jenkins was elected first vice president, Francis Painter, second vice president; Joseph Notes, secretary; L. A. Jett, financial secretary, and Edwin Worden, treasurer.

TUCKER

The organization adopted a resolution requesting District and Congressional authorities to investigate causes for rises in food prices.

Also adopted was a resolution requesting the Commissioners to investigate the extent of damage done by recent rainstorms in the area.

Born in South Washington in 1864, Tucker entered the grocery business when 17. He retired in 1903 to look after his responsibilities with a score of clubs, committees and associations to which he belongs. A familiar figure on Capitol Hill, he has been instrumental in local improvements ranging from elimination of grade crossings to construction of the District Building.

Youth, Widow Killed by Cars In Nearby Area

Boy, 8, Fatally Hurt Leaving School Bus As Playmate Watches

Traffic accidents in nearby Virginia yesterday took the lives of an elderly widow and an 8-year-old school child. The daughter of the Brazilian Ambassador was hurt in a Washington mishap.

ROY

Mrs. Lucie McMillan, about 70, of Virginia Highlands, died at Emergency Hospital at 4 p. m. from injuries suffered when she was hit by a truck as she attempted to board a bus at Twentieth street and Jefferson boulevard, near her home.

At almost the same time, Roy Clay Good, 8, of near Fairfax, was killed by an automobile in front of his home on the old Lee Highway after disembarking from a school bus.

Senora Lucia Fonseca, 23, one of five touring Latin-American women in this country on a good-will tour, and a daughter of Dr. Carlos Martins, the Brazilian Ambassador, was slightly injured in a traffic accident on Connecticut avenue.

Senora Fonseca was treated at Emergency Hospital for a face laceration after her car stopped suddenly, throwing her against a partition between the tonneau and drivers' seat.

Clarence Thomas, 38, of 907 M street northwest, was ordered held for Police Court action yesterday by coroner's jury, in connection with the death of Carrie Howard, who was injured Thursday while a passenger in Thomas' car.

Both Thomas and the driver of the car with which he collided, Raymond Holmes, 33, colored, of 1635 Kramer street northeast, are under $1,000 bail for jury trial on charges of reckless driving. The accident happened at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast.

Whittier Auditorium Dedicated

District Notables Attend Ceremony Marking Opening Of School Hall

Whittier School auditorium, first school unit completed in the $18,000,000 PWA project in the District, was dedicated last night by an overflow crowd of parents and other citizens, rejoicing to see a long-time goal materialize.

Representatives of the District Commissioners, of the Board of Education, school officials, Manor Park Citizens Association and the Parent-Teacher Association hailed the opening of the auditorium, which marks the completion of the school and provides a center for community gatherings.

Person Presents Key

Capt. John Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, representing Commissioner David McCoach, presented a huge symbolic key to Gratz E. Dunkum, member of the Board of Education. Capt. Person called attention to the construction and particularly to the acoustical tiles lining the walls.

Dunkum expressed the hope "this key will lock out from the school anything detrimental to the American people and the Government we serve, and will unlock the places of truth and wisdom."

The auditorium, added to the school at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest at a cost of around $50,000, stretched its seating capacity of 400 to hold the crowd.

Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, pointed out that the completed building was a "far cry from the day about 13 years ago when a portable school was erected on the site" in the founding of Whittier.

Flag Is Provided

Daniel B. Lloyd, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association, declared the building marked the "culmination of years of work by the association" for a school "to meet the growing needs of this expanding community." From the association, he presented a United States flag for use in the auditorium.

Mrs. Paul O. Gottwals, president of the school P.-T. A., pointed out how the auditorium would help in the expansion of the association's work. Hal Jackson, president of the Student Council, made a brief talk, declaring his "determination to enjoy the auditorium in the best possible way." Dr. Julia L. Hahn, supervising principal, brought greetings.

Among the visitors were Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Miss Helen G. Nichols, first principal of the school, who has the key to the first building.

Miss Elsie E. Green, principal, presided. The Rev. George E. Schnabel gave the invocation. Music was by the Roosevelt High School Orchestra, the girls' chorus of neighboring Albright Church, Pauline Birgfeld, piano solo; Mrs. David Gates, vocal solos.

Volunteer Firemen Plan Rival Engine, House at Bethesda

Barred from their customary meeting room, members of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department last night voted to build their own firehouse and buy their own fire engine.

The move is the latest in a series of thrusts and counterthrusts between the volunteers and the Bethesda fire board. The latter adopted a resolution last Friday dissolving the volunteers' association and doing away with their gratis services. The firehouse is now manned by a crew of 14 men and a paid chief.

According to Samuel T. Robertson, president of the volunteers, 25 members appeared at the firehouse last night for the regular meeting, only to find the meeting room locked, the key missing.

The locked-out members then met at the office of Robertson, four blocks away, and voted to buy land and construct their own firehouse by volunteer labor. Robertson said the volunteers had the means for purchasing a secondhand engine. He predicted the new building would be under way within six weeks.

Bradbury Heights Faces Bright Future

AIRVIEW OF BRADBURY HEIGHTS AND ITS LANDMARKS. ITS CITIZENS ARE TRUE SUBURBANITES

By Christine Sadler.

Although part of the "most beautiful city in the world," Bradbury Heights is separated from it by the insufficiently-bridged Anacostia River and by a 400-acre stretch of park land.

"We're really isolated out here," Henry Warner Austin, of 4215 Ridge road southeast, declared yesterday.

Only about one-fourth of the area is served by the municipal sewer system. It has no school building, no community center, and only one small frame church.

Yet the Bradbury Heights citizens are true suburbanites and cannot be too unhappy about their isolation—because every direction they turn, they see new streets being opened through, and they know a main sewer line is inching its way along Burns street.

They have hills, forests, lovely views of the Washington Monument, occasional chickens and cows, and plenty of hope.

They know the Alley Dwelling Authority is ready to put a low-cost housing development in the edge of their territory, in the Ridge and Anacostia roads vicinity; they know where the scenic Fort drive is going to loop their area, and they're counting on a bridge being placed across the river at the end of East Capitol street.

Facilities Coming

"The housing development may not be the equal of Greenbelt, although some of us have heard it will be, but it will bring city facilities this way." Fred B. Monar, who is developing an area he calls Park Ridge, declared yesterday.

He produced numerous clippings to show the excellent effect of low-cost housing developments on property values in other cities where they have been completed, and rolled out an enormous map of the District to show where the Fort drive is going through.

Mrs. and Mrs. Monar have so much faith in the future of their neighborhood, they have cut their farm into building lots and moved from their rambling farmhouse into a nearby new home on Ridge road and Texas avenue. One should say the proposed Texas avenue, for the thoroughfare is little more than a semigrading as it skirts their yard and enters Fort Dupont Park, the second largest park area in the District.

"On that plot there," Monar said, pointing right from his front door steps into the park, "an 18-hole golf course is going to be built. There's nothing can hold us back, now; but did you ever see a city of any size before that made it so difficult for its citizens to get improvements?"

Clubhouse Pointed Out

"We got gas less than two years ago," declared Austin, who is president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association. "The clubhouse for the golf course is going to be on the hill there near where that big holly tree is.

"This section here is going to be developed as a 12-acre recreational center and right along here, near the park where H street is coming through, we are hoping to have the school."

From Austin's home the nearest school is 3 miles away, in Randle Highlands. Anacostia High School, which serves the area, is 4 miles away and Orr School, where the first three and a half graders go, is 3½ miles away. In the country districts "out in the States" the county would run school buses for such distances. Bradbury Heights children going into Anacostia have to ride buses operated by two separate systems and pay two different fares.

Austin estimates there are 300 homes scattered over Bradbury Heights today and that the total population is between 1,500 and 2,000. During the four years he has lived there he considers that the population has doubled.

Most Thickly Built Areas

The most thickly built areas on Alabama avenue, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets, with Ridge road and Hannah place pushing for recognition.

Mrs. Monar, who is secretary of the citizens, pointed out that the Sunday school enrollment has jumped from 80 to near 250 in the last three years. The school is held in the only church building, which also serves as a meeting place for the citizens and is the nearest thing to a community center in the neighborhood.

The church is a small white frame structure that was built first at the "head of Pennsylvania avenue" where Fort Davis Park now is and moved, board by board, to its present location on Alabama avenue.

James F. Pierce, who has lived in Bradbury Heights vicinity for 50 years and with his three brothers helped build the church, recalled yesterday that the structure went up in 1912 and was moved about 1928.

Pierce is a florist and a landscaper, who has operated "on this same spot" for 40 years and who raises his flowers and shrubs on a 2½-acre plot adjoining his yard.

Business Section Busy

The seven-store business section of Bradbury Heights is on Bowen road, which, with Alabama avenue, is part of the Marlboro road and gets a heavy traffic from Marylanders rushing into and out of the District.

Austin proudly pointed to the grading for Massachusetts avenue. "That avenue is the longest one in the District of Columbia. It is going right through there," he declared.

Two years ago he was eager for a bridge across the Anacostia at Massachusetts avenue, but he now believes the East Capitol street structure would be more feasible, since it would relieve pressure on the sports center planned for the westside of the river and also would serve the low-cost housing development.

Bradbury Heights was named for Robert F. Bradbury, pioneer resident of the Southeast, who died in 1927 and was for many years known as "Mayor of Twining City"—the name once applied to Randle Highlands.

Near the Monar home is the W. D. Willis farm of 23 acres. Willis, who lives in a large, porched residence, plans to divide his acres into lots, also.

"The thing that provokes us the most, possibly," Austin said, "is the distances we have to travel getting places. My back yard just about touches the park, for instance; but we have to go 3 miles around to get to a picnic area just a half-mile away—because a chasm in the park has not been bridged. Going into Washington I usually use the Benning Bridge, although Mrs. Monar prefers going around the other way, using Pennsylvania avenue.

"We have no library branch across the river at all and the fire station is about 3 miles away."

In addition to the citizens association, which seems to have developed a real community spirit, Bradbury Heights is served by an active garden club which has landscaped the church grounds and keeps its eyes on the trees. The latter problem is not a great one, however, as nature has been lavish with the area and Cliff Lanham, superintendent of trees and parking for the District, is a resident.

Capital News In Brief

Indian Drugs Noted

In spite of 300 years of contact with the white man, Iroquois women until recently still used an ancient poison when they committed suicide, Dr. W. N. Fenton, of the Smithsonian Bureau of American Ethnology, discovered this summer.

Women who were deserted by their husbands customarily drank the hemlock cup, the institution announced yesterday in a report on Dr. Fenton's work. Use of the hemlock root for this purpose was first noted in America by Father Sagard in 1632.

Iroquois tribes were just as conservative in their use of medicines as poisons, Dr. Fenton found. The same compound potions are brewed today from herbs, roots, and barks as 300 years ago, for use as cathartics, emetics, blood tonics and specifics against pneumonia, the announcement said. The same remedies are also used under the same names by tribes widely separated and speaking different dialects, according to Dr. Fenton.

Open Door Invites Thief

Leaving a door open while he applied a vacuum cleaner to a rug in his home, 5061 New Hampshire avenue northwest, cost Ervin G. Thomas $1.50, a radio, watch, hat, an alarm clock and two pipes at the hands of a strong-arm bandit yesterday.

The man walked through the open door, brandishing a revolver, then knocked Thomas down with his fist. After binding Thomas' hand and foot the man took cash from his pocket and ransacked the house.

Burnham Heads Union

J. O. Burnham last night was elected president of Local 262, Treasury Branch of the Federal Employes Union, at its monthly meeting at organization headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

W. E. Perry was elected first vice president; Mrs. Ola G. King, second vice president; Isaac Lehman, third vice president; E. C. Hooper, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Virginia Schaefer, corresponding secretary; Miss Mabel Matthias, trustee. Installations will be held at the November meeting.

ADA Sues For Land in Southeast

Benning Heights Property-Owners Named in Action To Clear Area

A new move in the city to provide modern low-cost houses in the southeast section of the District, was revealed yesterday in a suit filed by the Alley Dwelling Authority in the District Court.

The suit asked that property owners in Benning Heights be required to sell the two squares bounded by East Capitol, Burns, B and Chaplin streets. Buildings in this area, which adjoins the $1,360,000 project at the intersection of Ridge road and Anacostia road southeast, now under way, would be razed and replaced by 300 modern home units.

Payment Funds Available

The property will be paid for out of a $6,600,000 fund borrowed from the United States Housing Authority, the suit said. "The price depends on what the court decides," said John Ihlder, administrator of the Alley Dwelling Authority. "We are planning simple little houses there. As to construction costs, if you can tell me what building costs will be six months from now, I shall be very glad."

District a Defendant

The District was named as a defendant so the Authority could acquire the portion of A street in the area and an alley that runs through one of the squares. Other Washington property owners named were Harvey L. Cobb, attorney; Fred D. Giesler, of 3540 Thirteenth street northwest, D. H. Zuckerman, of 4927 Georgia avenue. There were about a dozen out-of-town defendants.

Alexander H. Bell, jr., principal attorney of the lands division of the Department of Justice, signed the condemnation petition. Associated with him were Maurice Brooks, attorney for the Authority, and Henry F. Mooney, of the Department of Justice.

The suit said the Authority had been unable to purchase the property at a "fair, reasonable and satisfactory price" and asked the court to fix a price.

Some Nice Pictures Are Peeking Over Horizon

Impressive Line-up Is Announced for Earle; Variety Elects Strong Slate for 1940; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH "HONEYMOON IN BALI" ringing up a record of popularity as great as might be expected of a free trip to the picturesque island it celebrates, Zone Manager John J. Payette and his associates in the local Warner organization are sitting back chuckling as they contemplate the other attractions due on the Earle Theater screen immediately following the Madeleine Carroll-Fred MacMurray-Allan Jones frolic.

BELL

Next week, for example, will bring Zorina and Eddie Albert—"Brother Rat" himself—to the Thirteenth street screen in the celluloid version of the stage hit, "On Your Toes." Alan Hale, Frank McHugh and Gloria Dickson are additional members of the cast who add to the promise of a lusty week.

Following "On Your Toes," will come the Frank Capra production of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," concerning the press preview of which something was said in this space yesterday. "Mr. Smith" bids fair to be one of the memorable offerings of this or any other season, since it is being proclaimed the best of the three-time Academy award winner's efforts to date.

"The Roaring Twenties" will bring Jimmy Cagney and Priscilla Lane in another of those nostalgic numbers that have been in such high favor of late. This one will sketch the history of a decade that touched the poles of prodigal prosperity and the sudden bump that happened along with the depression. Surely you remember the depression!

With Charles Laughton in the stellar role and a newcomer by the name of Maureen O'Hara in the principal feminine part, "Jamaica Inn" should prove no less exciting a bit of gelatin than "The Beachcomber." That, too, is on its way to the Earle.

It was directed by Alfred Hitchcock and has Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams and Robert Newton in the supporting cast. This is one of the British productions in which Mr. Laughton starred before his reconciliation with the powers that be—in and out of the motion picture industry on this side—that led to his present casting in the role of Quasimodo in the new picturization of Victor Hugo's "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Rather a nice lineup, if you ask us. Rather a nice lineup, even if you don't.

Speaking of Charles Laughton, you missed the best laugh of the evening if you failed to tune in on that Sabbath evening radio hour during which he had the hilarious sparring match with Master Charlie McCarthy in a powerful piece bearing the title of "Mutiny on the Albany Night Boat." Mr. Laughton was cast in the role of Capt. Bligh—which will give you a rough idea, if you didn't hear it. Those who may have forgotten that Charles Laughton is as capable a comic as he is serious actor have only to recall "If I Had a Million" to be reminded that their memories must be slipping.

The Washington Variety Club, Tent No. 11 in the national organization, did very well for itself in yesterday's annual election of officers and a board of governors to assume control of the club's social and charitable activities next January.

Elected to the board of governors were John J. Payette, zone manager for Warner Brothers in this territory; Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater; Eddie Fontaine, Washington manager for Paramount Pictures; Harry Brown, Nate Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce; Clark Davis, of the Lichtman theaters; Sidney Lust, owner of the circuit of theaters bearing his name in and around Washington; Harry Lohmeyer, of the Warner offices; Sam Galanty, eastern division manager for Columbia Pictures; Fred Rohrs, Washington manager for United Artists, and Dr. Archie Engel.

Officers elected to serve during 1940 were Sidney B. Lust, chief barker—the showmen's equivalent of president; Hardie Meakin, first assistant; Eddie Fontaine, second assistant; Sam Galanty, re-elected to the post of treasurer, which he has occupied since the formation of the club, and Nate Golden, secretary.

These executives and governors will be inducted into office with the usual ceremonies at the first of the year. Until then, Chief Barker A. E. Lichtman and his fellow officers will continue to serve in their present capacities.

Speaking of nostalgia—as we were somewhere back there along the line of march—there was a bit of it for more than one member of the capacity audience at the Phil Spitalny-General Electric broadcast of the "Hour of Charm" from the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater Sunday night at 10. For some 20 minutes or so, prior to the actual business of going on the air, the house was diverted by the setting up of the remote control sets, the rearrangement of the Spitalny all-feminine orchestra, testing of apparatus, etc., etc. That is what we used to do with the old Crandall Saturday Nighters, back about 1925, when it was necessary to do something to hold attention while we got the "gang" down to the stage of the Metropolitan from the WRC studio, in those days 'way out yonder at Fourteenth street and Park road. It still is an interesting device, even if a reminiscent one. The actual broadcast was infinitely more interesting, including, as it did, Evelyn, Maxine, the Three Little Words, Rosalinda and Lola, Marian Williams, the choir and all of the other stars of the "Hour of Charm" ensemble, plus John Anderson, celebrated New York critic, who interviewed Martha Berry, "woman of the week," famous Georgian who dedicated what might have been a life of easy luxury to the foundation and development of Berry College and allied schools for the underprivileged boys and girls from the hill country of her native State. Or maybe you heard it all over the loudspeaker.

Jury Returns Happy Verdict At National

Helen Hayes, Merivale And Company Rock First-Night House

It probably was inevitable that at some time the brittle wit of those antic gentlemen, Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, should have been turned to the joyful duty of converting the imposition of the death penalty into a jury's verdict of acquittal. It is a particularly happy circumstance that their passion for justice, the pillorying of prejudice and a laboratory analysis of love should have taken the form of "Ladies and Gentleman" and so kept intact the new season's record of successive hits at the National Theater.

The new play, costarring Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale, under the direction of Gilbert Miller, was accorded a tumultuously enthusiastic reception last evening by one of the Capital's plushiest capacity audiences that kept the curtain going up and down an uncounted number of times at the conclusion of the last act. This was no more than another demonstration of the fine sense of discrimination possessed by Washington theatergoers.

"Ladies and Gentlemen" is a courtroom drama presented in two acts and six scenes, none of which contains a courtroom. That in itself is enough to place the immediate stamp of novelty upon the new vehicle for the expert uses of its stars and their associates. Its depature from convention in such matters, however, extends beyond that. It projects itself into the personal lives of the "ladies and gentlemen" of the jury, and, from their own experiences in contemplation of the predicament of a brilliant young author brought to trial for murder on purely circumstantial evidence, provides the extenuating proof of his probable innocence.

A Jury of Typical Variety

If by any unfortunate chance that should sound pedantic and little stilted, it should be known at once that the sagacious Messrs. MacArthur and Hecht have drawn their jury from the cream of the talesmen. Their "ladies and gentlemen" are instinct with the intellectual, comic, romantic and earthy qualities of a cross-section cut from the heart of metropolitan life. Among the 12 are the expectant wife of a bus driver, a mortician, a Yale man, one from Harvard, an architect, a husband, who has detectives watching his wife during the period of his jury duty; a barber, a bridge-playing clubwoman, a typewriter salesman, a saleslady, the private secretary to a motion picture mogul, and others of assorted viewpoints and previous conditions of servitude. The period of the action takes them from the sheriff's office to their imprisonment in a hotel, the scene of the crime and the jury room. The courtroom always is just the other side of that door.

Between the architect-foreman and the secretary there develops the same sort of quick and genuine devotion that is supposed to have provided the motive for the murder upon which they are sitting. The verdict of acquittal is made to appear as plausible as much of the dialogue and action is hilariously amusing. The pungent humor for which its authors are noted has full play in this work, but, high-pitched and farcical as it frequently is, never is permitted to jangle the sound note of seriousness that lends a poignant power to the climateric scenes. "Ladies and Gentlemen" is always literate without at any time attempting to be literary.

Is Adroitly Played

This vein of substantial drama, of course, is perfectly and quietly sustained by Miss Hayes and Mr. Merivale. This is not to say that Miss Hayes, as the clear-minded and straight-thinking secretary, and Mr. Merivale, as the long-married architect with a devoted wife and children, are denied the privilege of contributing to the fun, but merely that they do not indulge it quite to the extent of the others. Their roles quite fulfill the high demands of their distinguished talents in the field of romantic comedy.

Supporting performances of more than ordinary deftness are contributed by Robert Keith, William Lynn, as comic, in the role of the sheriff, as he was in "Three Men on a Horse"; George Watts, Roy Roberts, formerly of the National Theater Players; Pat Harrington, the barber-prankster; Connie Gilchrist, with the penchant for pickles; Evelyn Varden, Jacqueline Paige, Joseph Sweeney, the mortuary gentleman, and Edna West. Their speeches are geysers of laughter.

Nor heat, nor rain, nor cold, nor flood should be allowed to keep the ladies and gentlemen of Washington away from "Ladies and Gentlemen." It is a "must" for those who deem the theater primarily a place of entertainment.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 9 (INS).—In spite of criticisms that she was miscast, Myrna Loy's stock has gone zooming sky-high ever since "The Rains Came" started smashing box-office record. Not that I needed any specific screen triumph to tell me that the Loy gal is a good actress. Probably M-G-M didn't either, but the boys who run the show suddenly realized that she is not only a deft comedienne, but a gifted dramatic actress. So from now on Mrs. Arthur Hornblow will get the best there is in the story line.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"The Forsythe Saga," John Galsworthy's story of an English family, will star her in one of M-G-M's biggest ventures. Originally it was planned to make it in England on a "Gone with the Wind" scale, but that being out of the question, it will be made right at Culver City early next year.

Merle Oberon and Samuel Goldwyn have parted company, although her contract with him had three years to run. They said adieu by mutual consent without any bitterness on either side and now Merle, who has just returned from Europe, is free to accept one of the many offers made her. Not surprising that the Oberon-Goldwyn deal was called off, since formerly Alexander Korda and Sam shared her contract. But she has recently married Korda and relations between her bridegroom and Goldwyn haven't been the same since the United Artists law suit.

Either on the ocean or sailing any day now, is Geraldine Fitzgerald, heading for Hollywood and movies. She is expected here to get herself in readiness to play the feminine starring role in "Disraeli." "Underground" was originally assigned as her next, but between you and me and the gatepost, I very much doubt that that little anti-Nazi number can be made, since the U. S. A. is supposed to be neutral and this picture is definitely anti-Hitler. An interesting combination—Fitzgerald and Laurence Olivier—both unusual types and fine troupers.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Who do you think Maxie Rosenbloom told first about his plans to elope with Muriel Fader? Mary Livingstone, Jack Benny, Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor—no less. They were dining at Victor Hugo's and Maxie just couldn't keep his secret; Barbara, by the way, still has her hand bandaged. Bob telephoned to tell me she was getting along fine. Said she could only use one hand to dial with, so he was talking for her; Jane Wyman gets her final divorce decree and her friends believe she and Ronald Regan will see a preacher; Marlene Dietrich had to bow out of the guild radio show because of laryngitis but Zasu Pitts, who substituted for her, really went to town with Garry Cooper and was wonderful; Mary Astor is rehearsing for a new stage show that will be produced in oLs Angeles.

The Bette Davis-Warner disagreement is still among the unsettled problems. She has refused to return to work and nothing can even be discussed until she leaves her retreat in New England; Peggy Fears has gone to New York to have a look at the fall styles and see a few shows.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

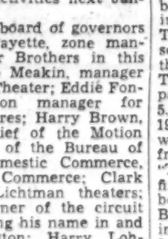
With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 9.—What a terrific laugh you'll get out of "Hollywood Cavalcade." I don't believe you'll ever want to accept Alice Faye again except in technicolor; she's so lovely and luscious. And does all that old Keystone comedy stuff as though she had really been here in the old days when the height of acting seemed to be a receiver for a custard pie.



HOPPER

You really see the movies in their infancy. How they grew! Right before your eyes you could see them grow in the length of Don Ameche's pants. He went from plus fours, which when seated, draped themselves on the floor, to riding breeches and all the trimmings—still the fashion in some of our better circles.

Most of it was grand fun; you loved the Keystone comics. The end became routine stuff and you felt somewhat let down, since you had expected so much more.

To prove the fans don't forget—when Mae Marsh's face was shown on the screen on a program, she got a hand!

At the preview of the week, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," the studio must have had a wrangle with camera boys, so only studio cameramen got pictures. And all the celebs in town were there! By the time Joan Crawford arrived, the boys had used up all their bulbs, and for the first time in years, she walked into the theater without a flash going off in her face.

A curious experience, and she told me she didn't much care for it. Loretta Young was again escorted by Jimmy Stewart, Sonja Henie with Allen Curtis, the young Fairbanks. Marlene as usual led the fashion parade in full length cape, sombrero hat lined with mink, and huge diamond bow-knot at her throat. Kay Kyser must have carried the script to the preview with him; his briefcase was the size of a week-end bag.

Hedy Lamar doesn't make a large salary, but had money enough to pay for the bleaching of her silver fox wrap. That's a new one, even for us—looks something like cinnamon toast!

Interesting to note that Rouben Mamoulian was the first Hollywood celebrity to read "Mr. Smith" and he took a 90-day option on it. During that time Frank Capra read it and persuaded Mamoulian to let the studio have it. That was before he did "Golden Boy." Sam Goldwyn had a chance at it, read and turned it down, couldn't see a picture in it! But Capra did, and he's given us the picture of the century!

Joe Yule, Mickey Rooney's father, will attend his first preview when he sees son Mickey in his initial starring role in "Babes in Arms." All about the climb of a vaudevillian, it's not unlike Mickey's own life to date.

Gene Towne tells me the reason he and Graham Baker chose "The Play's the Thing Productions" is because of success of "Pygmalion." "Shaw allowed no tampering with his play, and look at it. It sure took an old guy with a beard to show us all up." Well, Shakespeare told us that a long, long time ago. Guess we just forgot.

Actor Suffers for Realism in Picture

A first painful introduction to Hollywood realism was experienced by John Sutton, young Englishman who has his first "break" as romantic lead opposite Nan Grey in Universal's "Tower of London."

Sutton was forced to hang by his wrists during most of the nine day's shooting, manacled to the wall of a prison cell in the Tower.

After several rehearsals of the first scene, Producer-Director Rowland V. Lee asked Sutton, "Are you uncomfortable?"

"I certainly am," answered the perspiring young actor, believing that he was to be released.

"Good," said Lee. "That's the way I want you to look. You'll stay up there for a while."

Sutton was rewarded after a vigorous day in chains, however. Lee instructed his assistants to rearrange the shooting schedule so that Sutton would not be required to report the next day.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

Commissioner Landis vetoed the name of one of two umpires selected by American League President Will Harridge to work the World Series . . . Umpire John Quinn has been in the league six years and has yet to officiate in a World Series . . . All of the National League wasn't on the losing side in the series . . . The two National League umpires drew down $2,500 each for their work, the same figure as their A. L. colleagues . . . After his tough-luck 2-1 defeat in the opening game, Paul Derringer sought out Umpire Bill McGowan and told him "That's the best umpired game I've ever pitched. You didn't call a pitch wrong all day." . . . There were no squawks from the Yankees, either, despite the fact that McGowan called seven of 'em out on strikes.

POVICH

Silent Acres is the name given the Laurel track by the press-box peons since the track's refusal to install a public address system . . . Eighty per cent of Laurel fans are in the dark as to what is happening during a race and don't know how they fared until the numbers are posted on the board at the finish . . . Small-time horsemen are beefing loudly at Laurel's practice of refusing them stalls at the track . . . Scores of stalls, now empty, are being reserved for big-shot owners now racing their stables at New York . . . Laurel is making a play for the better horses with the consequence that there were two five-horse races yesterday while small owners, eager to race their nags even if they have to walk them a mile on the macadam road to put them on the track, couldn't get in the entries.

Big Ten Football Suffers Big Jolt

Knute Rockne's aversion to field goals—he rarely ordered his Irish to try one—apparently was not inherited by Elmer Layden . . . Both of Notre Dame's victories this season have been by three-point margins . . . Big Ten football suffered a jolt when Northwestern and Minnesota were slapped down by Oklahoma and Nebraska, respectively, last Saturday . . . The ten-cent football that President Hutchinson, of Chicago U., advocated last season, sort of describes the caliber of the Chicago eleven this year . . . Bill de Correvont, the Northwestern flash, lost 19 yards Saturday in his first two attempts at carrying the ball as a varsity player . . . Even George Marshall never suspected that the Redskins could score 41 points against Brooklyn sans Sammy Baugh.

A radio survey has shown that Boston and Los Angeles have the least ratio of listeners to baseball broadcasts . . . Frankie Frisch disliked his job of broadcasting baseball in Boston so much that he accepted a $5,000 cut in salary to take over the management of the Pittsburgh Pirates . . . All World Series broadcasters must be approved by Commissioner Landis who has blacklisted more than one . . . Only 30 stations broadcast the recent series, the poorest coverage since series broadcasting became an annual radio feature . . . The players received a generous cut of the 100 grand paid for the broadcasting rights by the Gillette Company . . . Clark Griffith is under contract to permit broadcasting of Nats home games next season, but the company may waive its rights if Griffith insists on canceling the home-game broadcast.

Miller Wasting Time on the Flyweights

Joe Louis, in a sports outfit that breathed of Bond Street, followed the World Series from New York to Cincinnati and rooted for the Yankees . . . The National Boxing Association may demand that Joey Archibald give Harry Jeffra a return fight for the title, but who is going to put up the $10,000 Archibald will demand? . . . Certainly not Max Waxman, Jeffra's manager, who took a $6,500 licking on the $10,000 he was forced to guarantee Archibald to get him into the ring two weeks ago . . . Heinie Miller is wasting his time attempting to revive the flyweight class, which is deader than the well-known herring . . . Ray Carlen, manager of Lou Nova, has told his fighter he will keep him idle unless Nova follows directions from his corner in future fights . . .

During the World Series in New York, Clark Griffith made an attempt to buy the Baltimore Orioles from Mrs. Jack Dunn . . . A Baltimore sports editor served as intermediary, but Mrs. Dunn refused even to confer with Griffith, declaring she was holding the Orioles and would bequeath the club to her son . . . Now convinced that the Nats must acquire an A. A. farm team, Griffith is in a frenzy to buy into the International League or the American Association . . . He calls the farm system a necessary evil and points out that "All we club owners were wrong when we opposed Judge Landis who tried to stamp out the farm system years ago." . . . The Detroit-Washington deal involving Cecil Travis is stewing again with the Tigers now more willing to part with either Rudy York or Hank Greenberg . . . But they will demand more than Travis in any deal, much more.

Al Simmons' Throw Leaves Fans a Debate

Sorteado, the horse that set a new American record for the mile and a half last month, was not invited to race in the Pimlico Special for reasons known only to the Pimlico track bosses . . . With Eight Thirty and Johnstown out for the season, there isn't much call for a Pimlico Special anyway . . . It won't decide anything . . . Counting salary and World Series cuts, Yankee Coaches Art Fletcher and Earl Coombs make more money annually than a half dozen big league managers . . . The biggest debate bequeathed fans by the last World Series is whether Al Simmons should have thrown to third or to second in the ninth inning . . . A throw to third may have nipped Charley Keller, but if it had failed, Joe DiMaggio would have been on second, with the tying run, a circumstance always to be avoided . . . Simmons' throw to second can be stanchly defended . . . Simmons' seventh-inning two-bagger for the Reds probably saved his job for 1940, incidentally.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Lou Gehrig, the greatest first baseman of all time, will remain with the Yankees—if the plans of Ed Barrow, president of the club, bear fruit.

Definitely opposed to taking any form of "sympathetic" job, the Iron Horse, whose fabulous career was cut short last May 2 when the baseball world learned that he had contracted infantile paralysis, probably will become a radio broadcaster for Yankee games. The directors of the Yankee Club, for which he played 2,130 consecutive games would give him any job he wanted. But Gehrig is sensitive and wants no job that is made for him. Though he could get it, if he so choose, he doesn't want any Yankee coach's job, nor does he want a clerical or minor executive job. He feels that by demanding any such post he might be depriving some one of a job. He wants to stay in baseball, with the Yanks, but his post must be constructive, and not made for him, or he won't accept.

CONSIDINE

The radio position is the idea of Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees. Under the present plans he would assist the country's No. 1 baseball announcer, Arch McDonald, by giving a semitechnical analysis of the Yankee games—which are broadcast by McDonald. Gehrig has a fine speaking voice and an ability to put over his message.

Remained Highest Player During Season

He will sign no more Yankee contracts. Though he made no appearances in the Yankee line-up after he voluntarily retired at the beginning of May, Gehrig remained the highest paid player in the big leagues right down to the last day of the season. As was expected, he was voted a full share in the slicing of the World Series melon, the eighth series in which he has participated, actively or financially. But Gehrig, above all others, religiously subscribes to the harsh-sounding rule that if he can't help, he hinders. Even if it were offered to him, he wouldn't sign a 1940 contract—unless he felt that it called for some task for which he was fitted.

"I don't want any sympathy," he told us, as he prepared to while away the pleasant fall days on his new motor launch, Eleanor's Water Wagon. "If I wanted sympathy for this thing that's hit me I'd have taken the line-up up to the plate every day during the World Series, and the fans would have given me a lot of applause. I know they would, but that's not what I want. I love baseball and I think there must be some kind of job in it for me. If it only pays $25 bucks a week I'll take it, but it has to be a job that I can honestly fill, a job I can say is my own—not something created for me."

Gehrig last week turned down a $36,000 a year offer to become the greeter at a mammoth new cabaret in New York. The place was, and is, to be outfitted as a dude ranch and Lou might have become rich—simply by lending his name to it. But he reasoned that he had never symbolized night club life and that this was a bad time to start it.

Iron Horse Due for Radio Career

He rejected the offer, as well as several others that were presented to him. He will weigh the pros and cons of a number of others in the next few weeks, but the probabilities are that he will wind up with the radio job—for that will take the least out of him physically, and (most important to him) no niche is being made particularly for him.

Despite his affliction, which has confounded medical science, Gehrig has taken the ending of his glamorous career philosophically. He doesn't for an instant think that his consecutive game streak was instrumental in weakening him to a point where he became susceptible to the germ which stopped his playing life. He is not even bitter about the fact that he was treated, for nearly a year, for gall bladder trouble and given countless injections of calcium. He believes with a fine clear-eyed courage that he can lick the disease and that there is a place for him in the game he loves—and it's not a place that is made for him out of sympathy.

Gehrig has become so enthused over the merits of the famed Mayo clinic, in Rochester, Minn., that two of the Yanks will visit there within the next week. The wives of Bill Dickey and Babe Dahlgren have been ill of late and the players will take them there for a complete check-up. Dickey also may undergo a scrutiny by the specialists.

Baltimore Woman Gets 81 Score

1926 Titlist Qualifies At Washington Stroke Ahead of Mrs. Stokes And Mrs. Leo Walper

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The qualifying round of the fourteenth annual Middle Atlantic Women's Championship yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club proved to be a comeback for the 1926 titleholder, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of the Elkridge Club in Baltimore, who took medal honors with an 81.

Mrs. Morrow, champion on two other occasions, and a seven-time holder of the Maryland State crown, needed par for a 77 on the sixteenth tee, slipped a little on the last three holes and still finished a stroke better than the District duo of Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, 42, 30—82, and the city champion, Mrs. Leo Walper, who came back in 39 for an 82.

Thus the tourney threatens to become a duplication of the Maryland State tourney at Congressional, where Baltimoreans Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg and Mrs. Jerome Sloman walked away with medal and title honors. They both qualified easily yesterday, with 86 and 85, respectively.

Mrs. Meckley Fourth

Mrs. Betty Meckley, a two-time former champion, had fourth lowest score of the day with a pair of consistent 42's for an 84, while Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, was 85, and defending Champion Marion Brown had trouble on the first nine with 46, but came back in 40 for an 86, a score duplicated by Mrs. Myron Davy, the Congressional Club champion.

Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, of the host club, won a four-way play-off for a single match play berth with pars on the first and second holes. The winner, Mrs. M. K. Barroll, Army and Navy; Gladys Greiner, Elkridge, and Mrs. J. T. Powell, Manor, were knotted at 98. Mrs. Tschiffely and Mrs. Powell parred the first hole and the former won the second after trapping her tee shot, blasting out and dropping a 10-footer. A 10 on the fifteenth ruined Miss Greiner's first flight chances without a play-off.

Mrs. Morrow dropped a pair of 20-footers, on the fifth and seventh holes, and was on her way to a sub-80 score before encountering an unplayable lie on the sixteenth hole and chipping trouble on the eighteenth, taking 6 on each for the 81.

Today's first round matches find two unusually good initial round encounters as attractions, with Miss Brown's title defense threatened by Mrs. Schluderberg, her conqueror in the Mason-Dixon Championships at White Sulphur. The other is Mrs. Sloman against Mrs. Davy, the District championship semifinalist.

Mrs. Sloman opposes Mrs. Tschiffely in another first-round match as the field of 47 of the 51 starters

Armstrong Retains Title

By the United Press.

Des Moines, Oct. 9.—Henry Armstrong easily retained his world welterweight boxing title here tonight when he scored a technical knockout over Al Manfredo, Fresno, Calif., in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round bout.

Referee Alex Fidler, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, stopped the fight 1 minute and 30 seconds after the opening of the fourth round, with Manfredo battered helplessly against the ropes.

Promoter Pinkie George announced that 5,500 fans paid $8,900 to see the St. Louis Negro outclass his opponent in all but the first round.

Armstrong opened up in the third round and threw a shower of rights and lefts which left Manfredo in a daze. The challenger clinched repeatedly with Armstrong and was unable to return the attack. The bell saved the Fresno fighter in the third.

The champion began where he had left off when the fourth and final round began. Manfredo fought back for the first 30 seconds, landing a few light blows and a fairly hard left and right to the Negro champion's face.

But Armstrong continued to throw punches continuously. He rained blows on Manfredo's jaw, nose and head and even found time to throw a few into the midsection.

Manfredo was helpless. He would have toppled to the canvas had he not been able to support himself on the shoulders of his attacker. He was clutching the ropes when the referee halted the fight.

The challenger, weighing in at 146½, outweighed Armstrong by 5¼ pounds.

Mrs. Hill Enters ChevyChase Finals

Mrs. Bishop Hill was extended by Mrs. Y. E. Booker in a semifinal match in the Chevy Chase Women's Club championship, but won out on the seventh, 2 and 1, and entered today's finals after her third straight crown.

Louise Claytor qualified as the other finalist with an 8 and 6 triumph over Mrs. L. O. Cameron.

Mrs. B. L. Jackson and Mrs. B. L. Simmons won their way to the second flight finals.

Chisox Down Cubs, Even City Series

Thornton Lee Wins 6-1 Game to Square Play at 3-All

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Thornton Lee pitched the Chicago White Sox to a 6-to-1 victory over the Cubs tonight, giving each team three victories in their battle for the city baseball championship.

The big southpaw gave up three scratch hits and one run in the first inning. After that the National Leaguers got only one hit, an infield hit by Stan Hack in the third. The official attendance was 25,950.

The final game of the title-deciding series will be played under the lights of Comiskey Field tomorrow night.

The Cubs' lone run came on singles by Augie Galan, Hank Leiber and Glen Russell, Galan crossing the plate for the tally.

The Sox got to the veteran, Charley Root, for their first run in the fourth, when Mike Kreevich lived on Russell's error. An infield out put him on second and he scored on Gerald Walker's single to left-field.

Dizzy Dean Pounded

What proved to be the winning run was produced in the fifth. Larry Rosenthal drove a hard single through Russell and Mike Tresh put him on second with a sacrifice. Ollie Bejma scored Rosenthal with a sharp smash through third. The Sox added another tally in the sixth and 3 more for good measure in the eighth. Lee set the Cubs down without a hit in the last six innings, not a single man reaching first after the third inning.

Post's Grid Winners Pick Eleven Games

Five Lucky Fans Name 11 Out of 12 Victors And Will Get Redskin Tickets; New Rules Will Govern the Contest

Nobody was perfect when it came to naming the winners in The Washington Post's weekly grid selecting contest last week, but five persons picked winners in 11 out of the 12 outstanding collegiate clashes and thereby won a pair of tickets each to the Redskins-Pittsburgh Pirates professional football game Sunday at Griffith Stadium.

The five best prognosticators of the week will receive their ducats through the mail Thursday or Friday. The winners were:

Theodore R. George, 1238 Columbia road northwest.

R. E. Ely, Route 2, Alexandria, Va.

Ordeen Knight, 1822 Lamont street northwest.

With inauguration of The Washington Post's fourth weekly football picking contest today, a new rule will go into effect. The five contest entrants who select the most winners in this week's list of games still will receive two tickets to the George Washington-The Citadel game Friday night in Griffith Stadium.

In event of ties, however, duplicate prizes will be given instead of awards being based on priority of postmark, under the new rule.

Crash Injuries Fatal to Hoyt, Head of A.A.U.

Noted Barrister, Legislator Hurt In Accident Sunday

HOYT

Hoyt, who was State's attorney for New Haven County, died at 9:20 p. m. in Flushing Hospital. He was 64.

Hoyt and his wife were driving to visit one of their three sons, Samuel, jr., at Huntington, Long Island, when their car collided with one driven by Gotthilf Blume, 59, at Whitestone, Queens, near the New York World's Fair.

Mrs. Hoyt suffered only minor injuries and was treated at the scene. Blume's injuries were minor.

Prominent Lawyer

Hoyt was prominent in Connecticut as a barrister, legislator and follower of amateur athletics.

His hobbies were track and swimming, the latter in later life when all three of his sons were members of college natatorial teams—Samuel E. Hoyt, jr., and Spencer Hoyt at Yale, and Alvord Hoyt at Lehigh.

Yale Graduate

The son of a prominent New Haven wholesale meat dealer, Hoyt was graduated from Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, in 1897, and from the university's law school two years later.

A Republican, he served as city court judge and member of the State General Assembly, was later appointed public defender in the Superior Court and in 1927 began his first term as State's attorney. He was a two-term president of the New Haven County Bar Association, and also headed the Connecticut A. A. U.

Night football of the schoolboy variety received a royal welcome into the District last night.

Upward of 12,000 fans, at a conservative estimate, sat down at Griffith Stadium to see Central High, undefeated inter-high grid champions, romp over St. John's High to the merry tune of 27 to 7. Summery weather helped the turnout as much as the prospect of seeing Washington's top scholastic elevens tangle.

Benny Steiner and Harry Martin, veterans of the Mount Pleasant backfield, starred in an attack that settled the heavier Johnnies on their heels before they were well started. Two intercepted passes, one of them by Martin; a 30-yard aerial from the arm of Steiner to Martin, and a thrilling dash over left end by Jim Porter turned the tables on St. John's.

Johnnies Score First

The latter's only score, surprisingly enough, occurred with less than 4 minutes of the first quarter gone. It set the claret-clad Vermont Streeters up to a lead that made St. John's appear easily the power of the game.

Joe Daly accounted for that stunning first touchdown when he took Frank Cady's slant from exact midfield on Central's 34 and weaved over the goal. Cady made it unanimous when he booted a perfect placement through the posts.

Central, however, wasn't to be denied long. It came back with its only first down of the opening half, advanced the ball to the Johnnie 4, from which point Porter opened Central's scoring.

Two casualties that may have far-reaching effects on Coach Gene Augusterfer's plans for another successful season marked the first half. Frank Cady, a 180-pound package of Hula-hipped halfback, was forced to leave the game when he rammed the ground on an off-tackle smash. He had severely pulled ligaments in his shoulder. Ed Fogarty, as dependable a wingman as can be found, was removed with a broken left arm a few second before the half-time gun.

Though Porter brought a lot of worried Central adherents out of their gloom with his first-quarter score, St. John's clung to a narrow margin when Steiner missed the placement.

Central Takes Lead

Into the second quarter the teams went, with St. John's holding its slim lead. The ball then rested on St. John's 30. On the first play of the second period the combine of Steiner and Martin set Central up to a lead it held the rest of the way.

With the opposing line expecting a plunge because it was third down and a scant 2 yards to go, Steiner faded back and dropped the neatest pass of the game into Martin's arms on the 20 and Halfback Harry moved unhindered to pay territory.

By way of making it convincing, Central scored again before the half had expired. This time it was an

Meade Rides Three Winners

By the Associated Press

Jamaica, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The Metropolitan Jockey Club's 1-mile course today threw open its gates for a two-week meeting, the next to last of New York's regular season. Some 8,500 fans visited the popular track. Warm, humid weather, more like one would expect in midsummer, and a fast track prevailed for the opening program.

Don Meade, well out in front of the country's jockeys for the 1939 championship despite something of a let-up at the just-closed Belmont Park session, was the riding star of the day. The comeback kid scored his third straight victory of the program when he guided W. H. Berri's 9-to-10 favorite, Early Delivery, to a two-length score in the featured Belgrade claiming stakes of 6 furlongs. This figure represented half the total winners ridden by Meade at the entire Belmont session.

Mrs. Clara Lyon's John's Heir came from last place in the field of six to finish second, a head before Paragon Stable's Deep End. The time was 1:12.

Meade had won the two previous races with Misrule and Innovia, the latter starting the Berri Stable off to its twin success.

Elaborate Farm System Responsible for Yanks' Success

Scouts Comb Hinterlands For Talent

Barrow, With 50 Yrs. Experience, Heads Finest Organization; McCarthy Helpful

By Sid Feder,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 9.—Joe DiMaggio belts one over the leftfield wall, and the fans marvel at the Yankees' greatness. Joe Gordon makes an almost impossible play in the infield, and you're amazed at the balanced perfection; Charley Keller hits three homers in the World Series, and everyone is astonished at this great club.

Yet the part you see on the ball field is, in the opinion of many baseball men, less important than the machine behind the scenes—the organization that made it possible to toss a team like the Yankees (many say it's the greatest of all time) onto the diamond.

Most folks just don't realize how a group of stars, most of them ranking one-two at their positions in any comparison of big leaguers, has been rounded up by one club against the stiff competition of other teams. To the ordinary fan, the team is there and that's enough.

Scouts Not Publicized

However, back of it is the most perfect baseball organization in the world, made up of the game's best player scouts, men who rarely make the headlines and don't care, and the top chain of farm clubs in the business.

Heading this set-up is one of the shrewder heads of the game, genial Ed Barrow, who has seen them all come and go during a half century in baseball. He is ably aided and abetted in the Yankees' construction program by George Weiss, head of the vast farm chain the Yanks have built up.

Of course you can't overlook Joe McCarthy, who only manages the club. Joe has a handy little knack of detecting a ball player on the way over the hump and starting on the down grade. He has been known to see it coming as long as a year ahead. So he can instruct the scouts just what to look for in a replacement.

No Prima Donnas

There's another thing, too, about the Yanks' bosses. They won't have a player on the club who is not a team man or whose temperament is on the "prima donna" side. They traded a winning but temperamental pitcher, Johnny Allen, to Cleveland on one occasion, and swapped a valuable, fast, but somewhat argumentative outfielder, Ben Chapman, to Washington on another.

Some point the finger and jeer that they passed up Hank Greenberg, but they had a comparatively young Lou Gehrig at the time, and they wouldn't have known what to do with Hankus-Pankus even if they had signed him.

They didn't miss fellows like Gordon and Keller, DiMaggio and Red Rolfe and Frankie Crosetti, and most of all, Catcher Bill Dickey, all because of the scouting system. Added to that is the manner in which, once they've caught a youngster who shows signs of potential greatness, they give him time to develop through their farm system.

Have Country Mapped

Chiefly responsible are the four top scouts—Paul Kritchell, Gene McCann, Joe Devine and Johnny Nee. These fellows, all with considerable minor league experience, have the baseball country quartered geographically. Well known throughout the baseball world, they have "lines out," important contacts through which they're tipped off immediately about some up-and-coming youngster.

They have paid particular attention, in recent years, to college players, and their dragnet in that direction hasn't overlooked many. That's how they landed Red Rolfe, who went to Dartmouth; Joe Gordon, former Oregon collegian; Hank Borowy, a promising twirler from Fordham, now with their Newark farm, and, indirectly, Keller, who came out of the University of Maryland.

Take the case of DiMaggio. Glowing reports had been drifting out of San Francisco in '34 and '35 about this Italian lad who could do everything. Scouts from every club sped to the coast. But the word went out that a leg injury had never come around perfectly, so most of them gave up on him. Devine didn't. He finally took Joe to a doctor, had the leg thoroughly examined, and was told it probably would be all right again in time. That sold Devine, and he was willing to go well into five figures to get his man.

Keller's Size Unimpressive

Then there was Keller. Charley was a lad who knew how to milk Maryland cows. In the summer months he played semi-pro ball in North Carolina. McCann heard about him and went to take a look. He wasn't particularly impressed at first, because Keller's size (he's comparatively small) didn't exactly fit into the picture. But not satisfied he returned four or five times, and finally signed Keller.

Then there was Gordon, whom Devine signed after hearing reports about a kid who played a whole lot of second base for an American Legion junior team and at the University of Oregon.

All of this has gone into the Yankees' domination of baseball, and has had one other pleasant result. Since the Yanks are the tops, youngsters want to land with them. So if the scouts do happen to miss some promising kid, he'll probably turn up by himself and let them know he's around.

Sometimes it pays dividends, as in the case of Pitcher Atley Donald, who won 13 games during the season just ended. Atley thought he'd like to land with the Yankees, so a few years ago he paid his own way to the spring training camp, was given a chance, and now he's a prominent member of the Bronx Bombers.

Virginia Starts Work for Terp Game Saturday

Offensive Battle Seen For Charlottesville Homecoming Event

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 9.—The breaks which prevented Virginia from recording a notable victory last week are charged to experience, and Coach Frank Murray launched preparations today for Charlottesville's first big football week-end of the season, with the Cavalier squad intact but still weary from Saturday's gruelling battle with Navy.

Maryland's undefeated team comes to Scott Stadium Saturday to figure in this year's alumni homecoming event, which looms as a contest featuring swift offensive operations. The Virginia freshman team, winner over Washington and Lee in its debut last week, will start the festival week-end with a Friday afternoon game here against V. M. I. freshmen.

The Old Liners are equipped with a highly mobile backfield headed by Joe Murphy, Southern Conference sprint champion and one of the fastest backs in college football this year, and Pershing Mondorff, best remembered here for his winning field goal in the Maryland-Virginia game of two years ago but who also has developed into a standout kicker, passer and runner.

Except for a slight injury to Albert Frerotte, regular right tackle, the Virginia casualty list was not lengthened in the Navy game. Many of the Cavaliers, however, are just shaking off the effects of fatigue, especially Jack Murden, whose slashing coverage of the field last week emphasized the prediction that he will rank with the two or three best centers in Virginia football history.

The story book performance to date of Bill Dudley, 17-year-old 158-pound sophomore back from Bluefield, would seem to give Coach Murray the balance he has been seeking for his "Virginia Special" reverse, and promises to be a major item in future engagements. From his wing position, Jim Gillette has been applying the pressure to the left, and now Dudley has demonstrated that he can carry the same scoring punch to the right.

Midget Auto Races Off Until Next Week

In deference to the Variety Club's Cavalcade of Thrills, scheduled for Griffith Stadium this Friday and Saturday, Promoter Ray Alvis announced last night that Thursday's midget auto races have been postponed.

The program will be carried over until next Tuesday night when two 25-lap features, instead of one, will be held. Alvis has been busy fixing the track and decided the added delay would give him a chance to get the Capitol Speedway in condition.

Bobbles That Helped Yanks Sweep World Series Prove Costly Two Ways; Cincinnati Forced to Return $150,000 to Fans

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—The tumult and shouting died along Vine street today. The captains and kings were gone. And the Cincinnati Reds' front office put a price tag of $37,500 each on those four errors that helped the Yankees sweep the World Series.

The club announced that tickets for the fifth game of the classic (and third scheduled here) would be refunded at certain banks, beginning Tuesday.

On the basis of average gate recipts, they were worth around $150,000, and would have been usable this afternoon had it not been for that amazing ninth and tenth inning finale of Sunday's game, in which the Yanks came from behind to win, 7 to 4.

Billy Myers bobbled twice, Ival Goodman once and big Ernie Lombardi once, the while five runs crossed the plate.

"Dying Swan" Act

"But that's baseball for you," commented Skipper Bill McKechnie quietly. "One could spend ten years trying to explain what happened, and still never reach the heart of it.

"The human machine—and that's what baseball is—just gave way. The fans only saw the results. It actually happened where no one could see it."

Many bewildered fans believed Big Ernie's "dying swan" act in the tenth, on which both Charley Keller and Joe DiMaggion crossed the plate, might be prophetic of changes to be made for the 1940 season.

"Willard Hershberger'll do the bulk of the backstopping next year," they said, but Lombardi, last year's National League batting champion and most valuable player, was not without his supporters—and there the argument stood.

Lombardi Missing

Lombardi himself was not to be found. In fact, Reds generally were scarce. They scattered to their far-flung homes almost immediately after the game.

The big catcher was represented as "naturally very disappointed and hurt" over his part in the disaster.

"Too bad it all had to end up that way," rued Goodman.

"That's baseball for you!" said McKechnie. He added no plans for strengthening the club would be made until the winter baseball meetings.

Dr. W. R. McLister Wins Ringer Event

Dr. W. R. McLister won the Washington Golf and Country Club Ringer Tournament with a 17-under-par score of 53 for a season's play over the Virginia course. McLister at one time birdied every hole but the long par-three fourteenth, where a par was his best effort.

Ralph S. Fowler, club champion, and L. H. Whitten were a stroke back with 54.

J. S. Nicoll, F. N. Stricklin, Dr. G. R. Huffman and W. H. Phillips all tied in class B, 12 to 17 handicap players, with 55. L. P. Smith was the class C winner, 18 handicaps up, with R. D. Young and J. B. Skinner next with 63's.

'Silent' Hill, Mute Fighter, On Card Here

A 200-pound fighting importation known as "Silent" Joe Hill was signed yesterday to meet Pat Comiskey, promising young heavyweight from Paterson, N. J., in the eight-round main event Monday night in Turner's arena.

The match will headline an all-heavyweight card inaugurating Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's career as the District's "boxing czar."

Touted as a former California Golden Gloves champion, Hill is handled by Walter ("Good Time") Friedman, the gentleman who imported Primo Carnera and steered him into the world's heavyweight championship.

Comiskey needs little introduction to this section. His appearances in top preliminary fights on most of the recent big-money fights have branded him as a potential "white hope." In less than two years of pro fighting, he has run up a record of 15 knockout victories. His last appearance was in the semi-final on the Galento-Nova card in Philadelphia when he knocked out Jarl Johnson in 2 minutes 15 seconds of the first round.

Godoy Is Louis' Next Title Foe

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced tonight that Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will make his next title defense against Arthur Godoy, of Chile, at Madison Square Garden on February 9.

Godoy, heavyweight champion of South America, beat Tony Galento twice during his previous United States campaign in 1937. Since then he defeated Alberto Lovell, of Argentina, for the South American crown.

This will be Louis' ninth title defense in two and a half years, a record never approached by any previous heavy champion.

Godoy, who has never been knocked out or floored, will sail from Chile early in December.

Bob Jones Loses Plea for Revision Of Income Taxes

By the Associated Press

Robert T. Jones, jr., the Atlanta golfer, failed yesterday to obtain a Supreme Court review of a decision denying him a refund of $53,338 which he claimed was overpaid the Government as Federal income taxes for 1931 and 1933.

This amount was assessed by the commissioner of internal revenue on $156,200 paid the golfer's father by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., under a contract for a series of 18 one-reel pictures relating to golf.

Jones told the Supreme Court that in 1931 he gave his father "the exclusive right" to his services as a motion picture actor for six years "for a nominal consideration of $1,000 per year."

The elder Jones was said to have put his interest in the contract in trust for the golfer's three children.

Jones' petition for a review said a "plan to decrease taxes . . . admittedly was one of the petitioner's motives in making the gift of his services."

He appealed from a decision by the Fifth Federal Circuit Court in favor of the Government.

Pair Score 7-Under Par 64 to Capture Qualifying Honors

Cliff Spencer's red-hot scoring streak suffered no letdown yesterday at Indian Spring, where he and his amateur partner, Claude Rippy, of the host club, won medal honors in the city's first-match play pro-amateur tournament with a 7 under par 64.

Spencer had six birdies over the 18-hole route, or an average of a birdies every three holes, while Rippy had two and came in on two more holes where Spencer was out for their winning score. They missed par on the third.

Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree pro, and District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart finished second with a 66, with Worsham chipping in three times from off the green for birdies. A field of 14 teams entered, several short of the expected number as the Baltimore pros failed to put in an appearance as promised.

Three teams tied with 1 under par 70s, including the favored duo, Ed Oliver, the long-hitting pro from Hornel, N. Y., and Volney Burnett, former Maryland State champion from the host club. Oliver, the Buffalo Open champion, arrived for the tourney after tying Andy Gibson for the Eastern Shore Open title at Chestertown, Md., on Sunday.

Gene Larkin, Woodmont professional, and Lou Harrison, of the host club, had 70s, matched by the pro Kenwood—George Diffenbaugh and John Bergelin.

Spencer and Wiffy Cox, who waged a 78-hole battle for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship last week at Columbia, will meet again in the first round, Spencer and Rippy playing Cox and his club member, Frank Goodwin.

The scores ranged to the 77s of the Eddie Stevens-Jerry Hart team and the Bob Barnett-Russ Hollebaugh duo, while Al Jamison, the host pro, and Johnny Burke, the former intercollegiate champion, were several strokes over their expected score with 76, going five over par on the last six holes.

Coach Sees G. U. Grid Streak at End, Unless Subs Improve

Jack Hagerty Disappointed Despite Win

Resting Regulars Called to Defeat Roanoke as Reserves Can't Even Gain

The disappointing play of the Georgetown second team and lesser reserves against Roanoke has considerably dimmed hopes that the Hoyas can extend their ten-game winning streak Saturday when they invade strong Syracuse.

This observation was made yesterday by the man who should know most about the ability of the Georgetown football team—Coach Jack Hagerty.

"Saturday clearly brought home to me and, I think, to everyone who saw the game, that Georgetown has a good first eleven and that's all. Needless to say you can't expect Georgetown or any other team to successfully play a tough schedule without capable substitutes."

So it is that in practice this week Hagerty will work doubly hard with his reserve players in an effort to give them all the tutoring and experience in scrimmage that discretion permits. By that is meant all the rough work he dares risk without inviting injury.

Two Boys Stand Out

Though dissatisfied with the team in general, Coach Hagerty was consoled no little by the play of Mike Kopcik, hitherto a second-string end and Halfback Lou Checas, who Saturday, for the first time this season, displayed the open field running talent which was expected to make Georgetown fans forget Joe Mellendeck.

Kopchik, so talented a kicker that he does most of Georgetown's punting when he is in the game, has been rewarded with a promise of a starting role against Syracuse.

Despite the fact that the best Georgetown weren't able to get a complete rest Saturday, as Hagerty had planned, they are, with a lone exception, fit to meet Syracuse. Jack Spencer, Ghecas' understudy who hurt his shoulder last week, is the only boy who will miss the game due to injury.

Colonials Remain 'Unknown Quantity'

Its opening game with Davis and Elkins having proved little one way or another, George Washington's gridmen will go into Saturday's game with Butler still an unknown quantity, according to Coach Bill Reinhart.

Butler does not figure to beat Reinhart's Colonials. But the combination of Butler at its top form, such as when it defeated Ohio University which in turn knocked off Western Reserve, plus G. W.'s long trip to Indianapaolis could easily prove disastrous.

Add to this the loss through an appendectomy of John Kokoski, one of the Colonials' few dependable guards, and the outlook is hardly promising for the G street eleven.

Catholic Faces Battle With Detroit

Catholic University, even though it has been the most impressive of the District college elevens, is in much the same position as regards its next test, with Detroit here Saturday.

The Titans not only are one of the strongest teams in the Midwest, but they seem to have the Cards' number, witness the scores of the last two meetings. In 1937 Detroit won by five touchdowns and last year by four, each time holding the Cardinals scoreless.

The only advantage C. U. will have is playing on its home field.

Terps Start Work For Virginia Game

Impressed no little with the capabilities of the University of Virginia team which he saw scare the daylights out of Navy last Saturday, Maryland Coach Frank Dobson wasted little time in getting down to preparations for the Terps' invasion of Charlottesville. Yesterday the varsity went through a long scrimmage with the freshmen, who were armed with Cavalier plays.

Dobson said he knew Virginia had a good eleven, but he didn't realize until the Navy game just how good Frank Murray's boys really were. Especially significant to the Maryland coach was Virginia's abundance of big linemen who also could get out and run ahead of the ball carrier.

Amateurs Fight Tomorrow In Stadium

Jimmy DeChard Meets Tony Novak in 40-Rd. Card for District Blind

Jimmy DeChard, young Washington amateur heavyweight, and Tony Novak, National A. A. U. heavyweight champion from Kansas City, will go through light training sessions today in preparation for their five-round match tomorrow night in Griffith Stadium topping the all-amateur show for the benefit of the District's blind.

The card features 12 bouts, a total of 40 rounds, beginning at 8:30 p. m., and brings together outstanding amateur fighters from the District and Eastern States under sponsorship of the Washington Society for the Blind.

The District Golden Gloves heavyweight champion will go into the ring an underdog against the more experienced Novak, but his speed and potent fists which have piled up a string of knockout victories on the amateur fight front are expected to reduce the odds at ringtime.

Novak will complete his training today at 2 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center gymnasium, and De Chard will work out in the backyard training quarters of his handler, Frankie Mann.

One of the largest crowds to attend a show in Washington this year, amateur or professional, is expected to turn out tomorrow. Entire proceeds will be used to set up stands in Federal buildings to be operated by the District blind.

The card includes ten three-round preliminaries and a semifinal five-round heavyweight match between George Galvin, hard-hitting Fort Myer soldier, and John Sinkovitz, of Harrisburg, Pa.

The line-up brings together Paul Coakley and Grover Davis, 112-pounders; Willie Tapp and Dick Billet, 118; Gilbert Mayo and Dick Shuckman, 126; Harry Pulzone and Johnny Bucarelli, 135; Bob Stonsifer and Whitey France, 135; Dick and Frankie McCaleb, 147, and Bill Daner and Johnny Dome, 160.

Novak and his manager, Joe (Doc) Reilly, and DeChard will be interviewed tonight at 6 o'clock over Station WMAL.

Col. Canning Scores His First Hole-in-1

Col. A. J. Canning shot the first hole-in-one of his golfing career yesterday on the first hole at Soldiers' Home. He used a 3-iron for the 145-yard effort, winding up the nine with a total of 33, par for the course. Representative J. W. Robinson, of Utah, witnessed the feat.

Wayne Millner Voted Week's Award as Outstanding Redskin

Brilliant Playing Enabled Mates to Romp Over Dodgers

By Jack Munhall.

In recognition of his masterful downfield blocking and his gem of a defensive play in eluding three Brooklyn blockers to stop Gust Zarnas from a touchdown in the second period, Wayne Millner yesterday was voted the "outstanding" Redskin player in Sunday's game against the Dodgers.

The award, made weekly by the Football Writers Association of Washington, entitled Millner to a $50 suit donated by a local men's clothing store. Of a possible total of 23 votes, Millner received 13. Andy Farkas, the Redskins' leading ball carrier Sunday, got eight and Tackle Turk Edwards and End Bob Masterson one each.

Played Great Game

The particular brilliant plays that earned Millner the honor, won last week by Farkas, were his block which made possible Farkas' 40-yard touchdown run after receiving a short pass from Frank Filchock; his block, which enabled Jimmy German to get loose on a 50-yard punt return, and his tackle of Zarnas on the 9-yard line. Zarnas, taking a lateral from Bill Young on the 40 had an open field ahead, save for Millner, and three mates to protect him. The Redskin end, however, feinted the Brooklyn blockers one way and then dove between them to nail Zarnas and avert a certain touchdown.

Though Millner undoubtedly deserved the "outstanding" award, the Redskin who perhaps should have been next in line was entirely overlooked in the poll just as he was obscured yesterday in the acclamation of Ace Parker's incredibly good passing performance.

Filchock Praised

He is Frank Filchock, who completed eight passes in as many tries for a total of 178 yards; personally scored the Redskins' first touchdown and assisted prominently in the manufacture of several others with his running and throwing.

Filchock, statistically, was a better passes than even Ace Parker, who connected 15 times out of 34 heaves for a total gain of 224 yards. Figures lie in this case, however, for all but one of Filchock's passes were of the short, flat type, on which his receivers picked up most of the yardage gained. Furthermore, Filchock was afforded much better protection than Parker, who was always on the dead run to escape oncoming Redskin linemen, but who nevertheless was dropping 20 and 30-yard aerials into the hands of his mates.

The Redskins, according to Coach Ray Flaherty, came out of the Brooklyn battle in unusually good condition, and will have available for next Sunday's game with the Pirates, Sammy Baugh and Bob McChesney, both of whom have been out with injuries for more than a week.

WAYNE MILLNER

Presently tied with the New York Giants for the Eastern Division leadership, the Redskins see a great opportunity to forge ahead in the next two weeks, as they play the Pirates twice while the Giants face more strenuous opposition from the Philadelphia Eagles and, especially, the Chicago Bears.

Hader Meets Evans On Grunt Program

Don Evans and Jack Hader, veteran actors on the local wrestling stage, will fill supporting roles Thursday night at Turner's Arena when The Golden Terror risks the well being of his 303-pound frame against Bob Wagner, a Norwegian villain.

Evans, a Dalias, Tex., groan artist, was given a big hand last week when he waltzed to a 30-minute draw with a toughie from the great Northwest, Johnny Katan.

The preliminary card reads like old-home week, with all the familiar faces back to attempt new heights in dramatic ability. Bibber McCoy and Abie Coleman will meet in the semiwindup.

Redskins Most Powerful Club In League, Statistics Reveal

The Redskins are the most powerful club in the Eastern Division of the National Professional Football League, both offensively and defensively, according to latest official statistics.

The Washington team leads its Eastern rivals in total yards gained, fewest yards allowed the opposition and in percentage of pass completions.

Most surprising is the fact that the Redskins, without Slingin' Sammy Baugh for most of the Giants game and the entire Brooklyn contest, top both Eastern and Western divisions in passing efficiency with a lofty mark of 56 per cent. The 'Skins' two nearest challengers for this honor are both Western Division teams. Cleveland with 54 per cent and the Chicago Bears with an even 50 per cent. All three are far ahead of the season record of 48 per cent made last year by the Giants.

Central Beats Johnnies, 27-7; 1st Night Game

Pass Interceptions Give Winners 2 Scores; 12,000 See Contest

intercepted pass from the hands of Steve Burns, Cady's replacement, that told the tale. Martin, standing on his own 45, grabbed the leather out of the air and raced down the right sideline for a 55-yard touchdown. Steiner converted and the score at half time was 20-7.

Certain that the game was in the bag, Central confined itself to holding the advantage until another smile from Lady Luck gave it its final score. Steve Burns was again the goat, his toss, intended for Dick Hathaway, being snagged by Center Jack Wilhelm on the Central 35. From there the husky lineman romped over behind perfect interference. The 85-yard effort was the longest pay-off dash of the game.

Two plays later, after Steiner had sent a zooming kick-off to Cordua on the Johnnie 31, Burns was the victim of his third intercepted pass. On a reverse and latteral from Daly, the little back tried to hit Hathaway again, but Steiner stepped in to grab it and get down to the Johnnie 41 before being stopped.

A Brilliant Drive

St. Johns' most brilliant display, other than the drive and pass that scored its single touchdown, came in the third period along the ground. In exactly two plays Daly and Tommy Chisari picked up 75 yards, starting at their own 3 and winding up on Central's 22. Chisari went off tackle for 34 yards, finally running into Steiner, and Daly ran 41 yards until he was pulled down by Porter. On the next four plays, however, St. John's lost the ball and its chance to score at that point.

Except for the fact that the score read 27-7 in Central's favor, St. John's had every reason to be the winner. The Johnnies annexed a total of 11 first downs to Central's three. Their passing performance, however, was by far less imposing than that of the Blue and White. Oddly enough, the end-around play with which Central scored almost at will last season was stopped with no gain or a loss every time it was used.

Sansalone, Munhall Star

That Central didn't run up a worse score than it did was mainly due to the line work of the Johnnies' Herb Munhall and Fred Sansalone. Joe Daly carried a backfield burden that was almost too much for him after the departure of Cady, and the reserves sent in as a last recourse proved decidedly ineffective. Young Burns managed for respectable gains through the line, but his passing, as indicated, treated Central to too many points.

Rodeo Beats All Sports, Veteran Says

Jack Westcott, on Thrill Show Friday, Saturday In Stadium, Likes Roping

Jack Westcott, dean of the rodeo troupe which will appear in the Variety Club's Cavalcade of Thrills Friday and Saturday at Griffith Stadium, placed his sport of riding and roping ahead of baseball, golf or any sports you could mention.

A veteran of more than 50 years, Westcott is still at the peak of the sport, and is supported by his son, Jack, jr., and a daughter, Betty, both in their early twenties.

Westcott contends it takes more skill to toss a lasso than to hit a golf shot, and he's never seen a wrestler that would toss a steer, like the stars of the rodeo. Riding bucking broncbos is a tougher job than hitting the line in football, the Tucson, Ariz., cowboy contends.

The rodeo, featuring the Westcotts, is one of many features of the Variety Club's show scheduled for appearances at the Stadium Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p. m., with a Saturday matinee at 2 p. m.

A crash show, in which jalopies are knocked into pieces, an aerial act and a steady program of action are included on the thrill-packed card.

Tickets are on sale at People's drug stores, all Lust and Lichtman theaters, the office of Sydney Lust in the Earle Building, Sport Center, Griffith Stadium and other points.

Breaks Leg, Plays Two Games, Then Complains of Pain

Atlanta, Tex., Oct. 9 (AP).—Pete Whatley, backfield star on the Atlanta High School football team, played nearly three games with a broken leg.

Physicians who examined him when he complained of a "charley horse" said the fracture was an old one, and Pete recalled the leg was first hurt during scrimmage three weeks ago.

Meanwhile the stubby 140-pound halfback had played two full games and part of another.

On Hunting

The two Virginia counties of Norfolk and Nansemond, almost entirely in the Dismal Swamp area, are open to bear and deer hunting throughout October and November. The section has produced some real hunting, but due to that long season the going now isn't up to that of past seasons.

ACKERMAN

In addition, irresponsible guides have helped greatly in forcing nimrods to other areas. Still, each year finds many who feel like giving it a whirl, probably because it gives them a chance in another State later.

The George McCoy Dismal Swamp Bear Camp is one of the best known, and reached by R. F. D. No. 1, Norfolk. However, we prefer the camp of P. W. Gwinn on Lake Drummond, not only because it is recommended by Norfolk County Game Warden D. A. Robertson, but for the swell treatment local hunters we have sent down in other years have consistently received. His pack of bear dogs is one of the best. To get in touch with him, address letters to R. F. D. No. 3, Portsmouth, Va.

For no more than another couple of hours driving, the Dismal Swamp counties of North Carolina are also available for hunting bear and deer and, we honestly believe, have far more to offer the sportsman.

North Carolina seasons get under way October 1 and are in full swing by November 30 in a variety of country and hunting grounds that extend for 500 miles from the almost virgin Pisgah Forest in the west to the swamps and sounds lying behind the great sand barriers along the coast.

The season in North Carolina on deer opens October 1 in all sections except Alleghany, Ashe, Surrey, Wilkes, and Yaden counties, where the season is November 1 to 30. In Avery, Caldwell, Cherokee, Clay, McDowell, Swain, Watuga and Yancey the season is November 1 to 15. There is no open season in Maxton Township, Stewartsville Township, Robeson and Scotland counties. There is no date set at present for the Pisgah deer hunt, and keep in mind that old time-honored custom of the Tarheels when you get your chance at that first buck. For if you muff it they will persist in placing upon you the woodsman's mark of the dub—a knife-abbreviated shirttail. Bag limits are one deer a day; three for the season; males only.

More bear signs than ever before have been reported in the Dismal Swamp counties. The season is October 1 to January 1, and the bag limit two a day and two for the season. The exception is in Alleghany County, Wilkes, Caldwell, Burke, Rutherford and all counties west, where the season starts on October 20.

There is no bag limit on squirrels in North Carolina, and the season runs until December 15. The same is true of rabbits, but the season does not open until November and runs until February 15. There is no open season on boomer and fox squirrel.

In every section of the State quail are plentiful. Hunt where you will, but in Craven, Duplin, Greene, Jones, Lenore and Onslow counties it is permitted only on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Season is November 30 to February 15, except in Union County, where it is December 10 to January 10. The daily bag permitted is ten, while for the season, believe it or not, the limit is 150.

So general was the belief on the Patuxent marshes that the daily limit on railbirds was 15 in the aggregate that Talbot Denmead calls our attention to the Maryland conservation laws which sets the daily limit on rails at 25. It does not specifically refer to gallinules or coots, but both are of the Rallidae or rail family.

The Federal daily limit on sora (Carolina rail) is 15. Rails and gallinules, except sora and coots, 15. So under Federal law a hunter may take 15 sora and in addition 15 king rails and gallinules, black and yellow rails, in the aggregate. In other words, one may take his 15 sora, and then an additional 15 of the others mentioned, except coots. Federal law allows the taking of 25 coots, and the open season corresponds with that of ducks.

Therefore, complying with both Federal and Maryland State law, the hunter may take his 15 sora and, in addition, 10 more in the aggregate of other rails and gallinules. Or, when the duck and coot season is open, and the rails are gone, he can take 25 coots. Unless Maryland takes the position that gallinules and coots are classed as rails, it would appear there is no open season on these birds. Gallinules, many of which are shot in the Patuxent marshes, are called king rails, and included ordinarily in the limit of 15.

So, from all indications, it is possible to take in one day's bag 15 sora and 10 more of the other rails and gallinules without being afraid of the game warden. Lee LeCompte has been asked for an opinion. Should it not agree with the above, it will be noted immediately in this column.

Savage Beauty Romps to Victory in Laurel Feature Purse

Rex Flag Is Second, With Montsin Third; Jockey Wall Pilots Brann's Winner Home

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 9.—After letting Challedon and others of her stablemates in the W. L. Brann barn earn her feed, Savage Beauty finally succeeded in chalking up some win money today. She had been saddled eight previous times by Trainer Lou Schaefer and had a second to show for her efforts. However, there was no stopping her this sunny afternoon. She took the lead early and was there at the end of the Tuscarora Purse, named for a little river that winds through eastern Ohio near some racing biggy's home.

Three lengths separated Savage Beauty and her nearest rival, Mrs. Louise Viau's Rex Flag was the No. 2 horse in the field of nine, with H. Friedburg's Montsin accounting for the third part of the purse. Those who bet that Savage Beauty would end her losing streak were rewarded with an $8.90 payoff while the man in charge of the time hung out 1:45 1-5.

A crowd of 6,500 watched a conglomeration of long and short shots finish on the important end of the various events. Shirt sleeves was the key fashion of the afternoon.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Heelfly held up the start for more than 7 minutes. Assistant starters tried all the tricks of their trade on the 5-year-old. When the getaway came he was outside of the stalls with a mask on his face. When the contraption was jerked off Heelfly got a fair start but he never reached serious contention despite some good money bet on him.

CHATTED, first away and steadied along on the outside while close to the leaders, responded gamely when placed to a drive to take command and won easily. MI JOCK, on the lookout for forward positions from the start, alternated in setting and pressing the pace and held on gamely, but was no match for the winner. PONEMAH raced on the inside from the start and was close up at the finish with good energy. WINTER SEA closed full of run from a sluggish beginning. MADAM CAPET went evenly. SCORCH was held safe. PORT WALES had been early speed and faltered. The others were outrun.

PHILLIPS PETE, much the best, was steadied along in the forward position while fencing well, went to the front when asked and drew far out to hold away to the end in handy fashion. COXSWAIN was rated for a mile, came willingly when put to a drive, but was no match for the winner. SCURRY ALONG was under restraint while closest to the pace of AUTUMN QUEST and PHILLIPS PETE in the first mile and weakened after making a bad landing. LATERAL PASS was always outrun.

FAYMAR, rated while closest to the pace of TENACIOUS, took command boldly when called upon and drew out while kept to a drive. GALLAHADION, a forward factor from the start, closed gamely. SUN PATTY, first away, lacked early speed and came with a rush in the stretch run. TENACIOUS set a strong early pace, but weakened gradually after being caught. EVER AFTER went evenly while racing on the inside.

Daily Double, CHATTED and FAYMAR, Paid $88.10.

DINNER DATE went up on the inside to take command, saved ground while shaking off PHARA BELLE and closed gamely under a drive. PHARA BELLE, tractious at the post and placed outside the gates for the start, was off alertly, forced the pace to the stretch and was weakening at the end. GRAND PAGEANT could not keep up in the early stages, but closed with good energy. OTRA went evenly and had no excuses. CHARLOTTE GIRL was held safe. STAR LINA had early speed and faltered.

SAVAGE BEAUTY took command in the run to the first turn, withstood the challenges of MONTSIN and CAPT. CAL to win with speed in reserve. REX FLAG, steadied when unable to get to the front in the early stages, came with a rush in the closing eighth. MONTSIN was a keen forward factor from the start and weakened in the final stages. CAPT. CAL, taken under steadying restraint while close up to the backstretch, came around on the outside, menacingly, but weakened thereafter. HEELFLY, started from outside the gates, was not a serious factor at any stage. BIG PEBBLE and HIGH VELOCITY were through after a half.

BIG HURRY, allowed to settle into stride, came to the outside for racing room leaving the backstretch, responded gamely when shaken up and was up in the concluding strides. UP THE CREEK was under light restraint while closest to LARKAR'S pace, came willingly when placed to a drive and barely missed. LARKAR set a strong pace, but faltered in the closing sixteenth. FAIR ALICE, off poorly, was rushed to contention and weakened in the closing test. ACE CALL could not reach contention.

CORNWALLIS set a good pace, swung out at the stretch turn and held on gamely. GOLDEN VEIN, outrun in the early stages, came with a rush, but hung inside the sixteenth pole. FAIR ROCK ran wide at the first turn while close up, came to the inside to press the pace of CORNWALLIS and tired suddenly. ELLACAW was held safe throughout. PALKIN had early foot. BRAVING DANGER was outrun.

FOXSTER, trailer for half, came to the outside while improving position approaching the stretch, responded to intermittent punishment to come with a rush and held on with good courage. TIME BEATER, steadied along close to the pace while saving ground, came out nearing the stretch, was ridden close by FOXSTER and fought it out willingly. HOWARD, off last, was sent to the front under hustling tactics in the opening quarter and tired suddenly in the stretch run. WINNING MARK moved up leaving the backstretch and faltered. # Cotton Crop Forecast Less Than Sept. 1

Government Estimate For October 1 Is 11,928,000 Bales

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department forecast this year's cotton crop, yesterday as 11,928,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight.

The forecast of production, based on the condition of the crop October 1, was the third estimate of the season, and compared with 12,380,000 bales forecast a month ago and 11,412,000 bales forecast two months ago. Production was 11,943,000 bales last year and the average production for the 10 years, 1928-37, was 13,800,000 bales.

The condition of the crop on October 1 was 68 per cent of a normal, compared with 70 a month ago, 66 a year ago, and 61, the average condition on that date for the 10 years 1928-37.

The indicated yield of lint cotton was reported as 235.7 pounds to the acre, compared with a forecast of 244.7 pounds a month ago, 223.7 two months ago, 235.8 produced last year, and 190.8, the 1928-37 average yield.

The Census Bureau reported 6,686,712 running bales, counting round as half bales and excluding linters, of this year's crop had been ginned prior to October 1, compared with 6,577,109 a year ago, and 8,260,071 two years ago.

Cotton Futures Lower Despite Crop Report

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—The cotton futures market stuck to a jerky course up to the last minute of trade today. Final prices were 7 points lower to 2 higher.

The noon Government crop estimate for 11,928,000 bales—more than 450,000 under the September 1 figure—turned the market around abruptly after an early setback. Prices at one time were up 4 to 11 points.

There was no follow-through to this buying flurry, however, and when the sharp advance attracted increased hedging sales and liquidation of long accounts, prices sagged. Distant months were most resistant.

Brokers said the majority of traders were still a little timid over getting in too deep one way or another in view of the haze of uncertainties surrounding events abroad.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures pulled out of a morning slump today, but were still 1 to 7 points net lower at the close. A bullish interpretation of the Government cotton crop estimate helped the partial recovery.

Sales totaled 125 lots: December, 6.65; January, 6.67; March, 6.81 bid; May, 6.90.

Boston, Oct. 9 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agri.)—The wool market in Boston was very quiet today. Both holders and users were showing a waiting attitude. While few bids for wool were being received, holders were making little effort to move wool. Asking prices were largely nominal because of the lack of trade and mostly unchanged compared with the close of last week.

Court Approves B. & O. Plan To Cut Interest

Baltimore, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's plan for reduction of annual fixed interest charges on its funded debt was approved by Federal court today.

The court said the plan "is fair and equitable and indeed highly desirable and advantageous for all the creditors as well as in the public interest, and that it is feasible in that it has a reasonable prospect of being successfully carried out.

The plan provides that annual fixed charges on the funded debt of the company and its subsidiaries for a period of eight years be reduced from $31,421,742 to $19,644,679. Interest is made contingent and payable only if earned, to the extent of $11,376,435.

Extension of maturities aggregating about $185,000,000 also is provided under the plan.

The application was presented to Federal court several weeks ago after President Roosevelt signed the Chandler bill, applicable to railroads seeking adjustment. The plan was opposed by a minority group of bondholders.

European War Gives Our Steel Big Export Field

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—The war has shut off the major sources of steel exports in the world markets and opened an opportunity for the United States to expand its sales abroad, the American Iron & Steel Institute indicated today in a study of the situation.

In the three and a half years ended June 30 last, the survey showed, Germany exported 11,011,000 gross tons of steel; the United Kingdom 7,312,000; the United States 6,548,000; France, 5,278,000, and Poland 1,022,000.

Average annual exports of neutral steel-making countries, aside from the United States, have not topped an estimated 5,000,000 tons in any recent year, the institute said. The sales from these neutral sources, it was figured, amounted to only about 70 per cent of the exports from the warring countries.

Break Pushes Wheat Under U.S. Loan Level

But Market Later Recovers Part of Early Decline

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Rains in the grain belt, relieving severe drought conditions in many districts where farmers have been delaying winter wheat seeding, caused wheat prices to slump as much as 1⅞ cents a bushel, but the market later regained some of this loss.

The price break in early dealings carried wheat below 80 cents a bushel, the Government loan rate at Chicago, for the first time since September 2, when the war in Europe was only two days old. July contracts, representing the new crop, which is off to a late start, were weakest, falling to 77½, but later displayed most recovery power.

Wheat closed ¼ to ¾ lower than Saturday; December, 80¾@80⅝; May, 80½@80⅜, but corn was ½ to ⅞ higher; December, 49½@49⅝; May, 52⅛. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ lower; rye, ½ to ¾ down and lard, 7 to 10 higher.

Early selling of wheat also was associated with continued peace in Europe, but while the European situation was the dominating trade factor, most dealers refused to take market action on the basis of possibilities for continued war or peace. Buying on the rally was stimulated by the fact that prices had slipped temporarily below the Government loan level. Furthermore, much more moisture was needed to replenish subsoil reserves.

Strength in corn, which advanced as much as a cent at times, also served to attract buyers to the wheat pit.

Stocks Higher in Morning, Lower Later Traders Await Straws on War or Peace U. S. Government Bonds Rise Briskly

New York, Oct. 9.—The strange blend of confidence and nervousness which pervaded financial markets in the last ten days was in evidence once more in the first session of the week. Quiet strength kept share prices on the upgrade in the morning, but traders showed no disposition to follow through. Wall Street was plainly waiting for some positive declaration by the Anglo-French as to whether war will proceed or peace be considered. The drift of quotations was lower in the afternoon. The close was irregularly up from Saturday's last prices, but rail equipments, motors and steels were the only divisions to show much improvement.

Volume on the Stock Exchange shriveled to the smallest total of any full session since the start of the "war market" movement, turnover being 617,942 shares. The composite for the 100 key stocks was 0.9 higher.

Steel Production Mounts

Domestic business news could have given inspiration to the long side. Steel production was announced at a new high for approximately 29 months; General Motors September sales report revealed a large increase over the preceding month and last year, with consumer buying outrunning dealer purchases; textile groups told of enormous gains in orders. But the war factor was as powerful as ever and was aggravated by a flood of new analyses, emanating from several conventions, including banking and trade.

The consensus from business leaders appeared to be that Germany would be prevented from buying much here because of the handicap to her shipping by the Allied blockade; and that the Anglo-French bloc is not presently in urgent need of supplies other than aircraft. Trade quarters were plainly concerned over safety of American merchant marine and the status of foreign trade generally. A banker emphasized that if the war does go on, weakened belligerents will have to borrow money from America to rebuild. Experiences in that respect were unfortunate after the 1914-1918 affair.

In an analysis of the domestic outlook, a leading stock exchange firm pointed out that with declaration of war there was superimposed on already improving business structure a rush to build inventories before prices should rise and war orders pour in. This, in turn, led to the swerve to war psychology in securities and commodities. No two things—demand for goods and stock prices—it was pointed out, can be more vulnerable to upsets. Business men and investors have had such experience. There is a time-lag between inventory accumulation and the receipt of orders to consume such stocks. During such time-lag, various uncertainties as to the main position could produce setbacks, wide fluctuations and uncertainties such as have obtained since mid-September.

Peace Prospects

Current hesitation and indefiniteness of price trends in stocks is consequently traced to the belief that peace, or even continuation of war in a negative form, would modify the prosperous appearance of domestic business for a time. Whether there are any grounds for an expectation of peace is not clear. Wall Street hopes to have a more definite clew from the British prime minister on Wednesday.

The improvement in steel shares was not unanimous. Steel common, as the market leader, once more showing a loss of ¼ point, closing at 73⅞, or about a point under its best of the day. Bethlehem, on the other hand, firmed half a point. General Motors and Chrysler were in demand on a fair scale, but buying here was cautious, due to new wage demands within the industry by cerain unions. Aviation stocks backed and filled without much change. Eastern Airlines was a firm exception, closing at 19 for a gain of nearly a point.

Treasury Bonds Gain

Treasury bonds advanced on the stock exchange and in the outside market today without attracting any large volume of dealings. Final prices in the over-counter section showed the list unchanged to 11/32 higher. These levels were somewhat under the best of the day. Appraisal of the prospects for European peace appeared to be the principal factor in the rise.

Total bond trading sank to $5,442,000 on the exchange, against $9,264,000 on the last previous full trading day. In this limited volume price movements lacked any great significance. The Herald Tribune average of 30 issues closed with a gain of 0.10 points, to which a gain of 0.35 in industrial loans and a rise of 0.44 point in utilities contributed. Rails, both speculative and high grade, had an easier tone in the averages.

The foreign section attracted some attention, good features being higher levels in Canadian, Belgian and Italian bonds, with gains ranging up to around 2 points. Argentines were active and easier.

Some of the strength in utilities appeared in Commonwealth Edison issues with gains up to 1½ points. Consolidated Edison loans also were strong.

Moving against the general changes in rails, many of the Baltimore & Ohio bonds sold higher with the announcement of court approval of the plan for interest and maturity changes. Lehigh Valley, which also has a similar plan pending, was not so well liked. Bethlehem Steel and United States Steel bonds both improved.

Every Industry Here Expanded in Last World War

New York, Oct. 9.—Every industry during the last World War reported an increase in the value of its output, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The increases, however, were far from uniform. The aircraft industry reported that the value of its products showed an increase of 1,719.4 per cent from 1914 to 1919, while the marble and granite industry reported an increase of only 20.7 per cent.

The increase showed by the aircraft industry, however, was exceptional. The increase by the automobile industry, which reported the second largest gain, was much smaller. The value of automobile production rose 374.5 per cent between 1914 and 1919.

The total value of the products of all manufacturing industries combined was 159.0 per cent higher in 1919 than in 1914. Of 58 individual industries, 20 industries reported increases in excess of the gain for all industries combined. The remaining 38 industries reported increases of less than 159.0 per cent.

Edward A. Dent Is Named D.C. Tax Assessor

Was City Surveyor 6 Years; Succeeds Fred D. Allen

Edward A. Dent, for six years District surveyor, was appointed city tax assessor yesterday to succeed Fred D. Allen, who died last week.

Dent followed Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen in the post of surveyor and is the second man to step from surveyor to assessor. He is a native of Washington and has been an employe of the District for 27 years. In 1912 he was appointed to the surveyor's office and was chief assistant when Hazen became Commissioner.

He was educated in the District public schools and graduated from McKinley High School. Prior to entering District service, Dent was connected with a Government survey in the West. As surveyor, he also served on the District land purchasing committee, special treasurer of the Alley Dwelling Authority and as a member of the coordinating committee of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Dent is 48. He lives with his wife and two children at 4701 Connecticut avenue northwest. The new post will carry a salary ranging from $6,500 to $7,500 a year. The surveyor's position pays $6,000.

The Commissioners did not indicate who would be named surveyor.

Soviet Press Backs Hitler's Peace Terms as 'Practical'

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Oct. 9.—Soviet Russia backed Germany tonight in her drive for peace in Europe and at the same time sought to consolidate her military, territorial and economic gains in a diplomatic chain stretching from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

In the first comment to appear in Russia on Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech of Friday, the government newspaper Izvestia made a demand for peace on the basis of Hitler's terms, which the paper called "real" and "practical," and attacked Britain and France.

Izvestia accused the Allies of "returning to the Middle Ages" in waging war to "exterminate Hitlerism."

"It is impossible," the newspaper declared, "to exterminate any idea or any opinion by fire and sword. One may respect or hate Hitlerism or any other system of political opinions. This is a matter of taste. But to begin a war for the 'extermination of Hitlerism' means to admit to criminal silliness in policy."

The "disintegration" of Poland was called "irrefutable proof that its lack of vital power" removed the causes for further war.

Still, Izvestia went on, British and French newspapers "demnad that Hitler's peace proposals be given no consideration and that war be continued" until the aims of the Allies were "fully accomplished."

Status of Negotiations

The status of Russia's four-linked negotiations or prospective negotiations was this:

A pact with Lithuania, giving Russia increased naval and military bases in the Baltic and transit privileges through that country was seen as imminent. This was expected to facilitate the U. S. S. R.'s shipment of materials to Germany. Part of the Lithuanian mission has returned to Kaunas for consultation with the government.

Negotiations with Turkey appeared to have bogged down, since more than a week has passed since Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu has seen Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

A Finnish delegate, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, was expected to arrive Wednesday in response to a Soviet "invitation" to diplomatic talks on top of the economic ones already under way. It was understood unofficially that Finland, backed by the moral support of the Scandinavian countries, especially Sweden, would not submit as readily to the Soviet demands as had Estonia and Latvia. Both these Baltic states have granted the Soviet air and naval bases and transit privileges.

Russia announced speedy agreement with a German trade delegation that arrived only yesterday. Foreign circles, however, refused to be impressed by claims of magnitude of the deal.

Timber, Wheat, Available

They said Russia was obviously in no position to export great quantities of raw materials, which she was lacking at home, unless she did so at the expense of home consumers. At most, these observers believed, Germany could expect some timber and wheat, and comparatively small quantities of cotton and petroleum.

An announcement by the official news agency, Tass, said the agreement provided that Russia should immediately begin supplying Germany with materials, and Germany begin filling orders for the U. S. S. R.

Observers felt that Russia's problem of transport to Germany would be greatly facilitated, however, through the Soviet bargains with the Baltic states, most of whose harbors are not ice-locked during the winter, an advantage her own northern ports do not enjoy.

With the Lithuanian delegation back home, after conversations which began last Wednesday, Russian newspapers printed dispatches from Tallinn, Estonia, declaring that Lithuania was eager for an agreement with Russia and for "Soviet protection against imperialist countries."

Russo-Nazi Trade Pact

Copyright by New York Times.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—Results of the Russo-German trade negotiations, if expectations of Germany are realized, will be forthcoming fully as quickly as those of the political negotiations between Berlin and Moscow.

The official Moscow communique was exploited as proof that the Russo-German accord on this field permits of no speculation about difficulties or long negotiations.

Furthermore, it is stated authoritatively in Berlin that the speed and smoothness with which Germany and Russia are settling the details of their mutual trade pact are proof of the effectiveness of the Russo-German consultations which were arranged for in the event of continuation of the war in the west.

It may be regarded as certain, it was declared authoritatively, that such consultations, if necessary, will be forthcoming just as promptly and with the same speedy results as all negotiations between Germany and Russia hitherto.

Goering to Take Command

Paris, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Dispatches reaching Paris from neutral sources reported today that as a consequence of decisions taken at a caucus of Nazi chiefs and the German cabinet on October 2, Hitler will arrive on the Western Front this week to assume supreme command of the armies and air force, but will then charge Marshal Goering with active command in the Fuehrer's behalf.

Goering would outrank Col. Gen. von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army. The Paris newspaper L'Oeuvre, in a dispatch from a neutral capital, says Goering's plan for a blitzkrieg comparable to that used against Poland would supplant the German general staff's plan of operations.

The Germans today fired more shells on French forts and front-line positions in 24 hours than they had sent over in the whole previous week. The fire appeared to come chiefly from guns massed on the west bank of the Saar and firing from field positions. These were supported by bigger guns in Siegfried Line emplacements deep in the hills 5 miles east of the Saar.

It is better to put a little blind faith in partner and carry him along to game even though you don't know what he is up to, than to risk losing a plus score by leaving him one trick shy on his contract.

It is natural to make mistakes; it is natural to get mixed up in the bidding, but there are times when it is wiser to carry on, even if confused, than to stop short and lose game or slam.

If partner has gone very much astray, raising him higher may add to the defeat, but the chances are that if you leave him dangling and he is in a bad spot, the opponents will realize it and tack on a double.

Moreover, even if your partner is a poor bidder, he may be a good player and be able to find that extra trick.

Here is a typical example submitted by R. J. The cards:

◇ A K Q J 5 3 2
SOUTH
◇ None
♣ J 5 3

R. J. says: "South was the original bidder and opened with three hearts. There was no intervening bid and North passed. Adversaries led a diamond and seven was made whereupon North got it from all angles for not responding. North claimed South's initial bid was wrong.

To be sure, South's initial bid was wrong. A three-bid as used by most players today is a defensive measure, indicating a long, strong suit but little else. With his strong major two-suiter, South should have no fear in starting with one heart.

Technically, North has no obligation to carry the three-heart bid to game, but so many things may happen to develop that tenth trick that it is worth the gamble. South may be conservative, or have made an outright error, as he actually did; the opponents may make a favorable lead or play or South's cards may fit perfectly with North's. There are so many chances to make the game that it is a pity to pass.

By Dorothy Canfield

Chapter 17

After she had had her tea, Aunt Lavinia's eyes began to droop again. But it was all right, thought Timothy, she was not in one of her—anxious—periods. "Well, go along, Tim, and have Susan show you where that corner is," she said sleepily. "Ye'll be back before I wake up."

So the other two carried the tray back to the kitchen, washed and wiped the few dishes in the atmosphere of domesticity that always goes with the washing of dishes, put them away in the corner cupboard of old pine on which Susan laid her hand, but of which she did not speak.

Aloud he asked, "Do we neer our wraps? The sun is so warm."

He had thought of going without his hat—a gesture to which, looking enviously at the bareheaded academy boys, he had of late more than once inclined. But he knew all to well the difference that crude daylight would show between his thinning, sandy, graying hair and those thick tousled mops. And he always caught cold if he went without a hat.

"NO, WE'D better take our coats," said Susan, sagely. "After all, it's not June, it only feels like June. It's Indian summer."

She fingered the wool knowledgeably. "Oh, yes, that ought to be enough."

Their voices were hushed, not to disturb Aunt Lavinia. They moved around the cozy kitchen as though they had always been there, putting wood on the fire, pulling down a shade, stooping to tie a shoe. They were close in the intimacy Timothy had not known for so many years. But it did not startle him. It began to seem natural. "Let yourself go," he admonished himself, floating relaxed on its warm current.

They went out of the back door into the dark limbo of the woodshed, and emerged from that into the sweet pale sunshine of November. There was not a breath of wind. Susan took off her beret and put it in her pocket. Her thick, soft hair began lifting and stirring in currents of air that would have been imperceptible to anything with weight of its own.

They struck diagonally across the uptilted oblong of the hill-pasture, its green crisped to a slivery brown by the first frosts. After a few steps, "Do you know what I'd like?" she said, using Aunt Lavinia's turn of phrase. "I'd like awfully—if you wouldn't mind telling me—to know some more about—Mrs. Henry."

The other name had trembled so obviously on her tongue that Timothy could say, quite naturally, "Call her Aunt Lavinia. She'd like that."

"Yes, she told me she would. But I didn't know whether you would. Well, ever since you said she had done so much for you, I've wondered if it was anything you'd feel like telling me."

It was a knock at his door. Timothy Hulme put his hand on the latch.

After a moment's thought, "It's mixed up with the whole family story. I'm afraid, unless I told you a great deal about the rest of us . . ."

"I'd love that," said Susan.

He said lightly, "Oh, yes, I forgot, of course, all Vermont young people are Spartan-bred for long family stories."

But she did not smile. She turned her head to look at him expectantly.

He pushed open the door that had always been shut. "All right, I'll begin at the beginning."

They were standing by an outcropping of rock. "Let's sit down for a while," suggested Susan. The Indian summer sunshine for all its paleness was not without strength. The rock felt as warm as the hand laid on it.

"Let yourself go—don't be afraid of falling," thought Timothy Hulme, and in a dreamy murmur began with the first words that came into his head, "When my brother and I were little, Aunt Lavinia and my mother used to tell us that the reason Aunt Lavinia followed my father and mother to America was because my mother's alto voice couldn't get along without her soprano. The real reason was that they loved each other."

DOROTHY CANFIELD

THE QUIETLY spoken words echoed in his ears as if he had shouted them. He was overwhelmed by their meaning, by his first fleeting glimpse of the infinitely various forms love takes in human lives. Why, love had been the prime mover for it all. He repeated the phrase with astonishment, "They loved each other!" And now his voice was not muffled, it was a bell from which a chance stroke draws out a note of loud sonority. He let its vibrations sink into silence before he explained his surprise to his listener. "Did you ever notice that you seem to understand something better when you put it into words? I've never spoken to anyone about this before. The minute I even begin to tell you about it I see for the first time what was really back of all that happened. It was the love between the sisters. My mother's happy marriage did not separate them, as marriage usually does."

Thinking about his mother's happy marriage, he looked down absently at the lichened rock on which they sat. Harsh and unshapen, it looked as though it could never be anything but cold. Yet when he pressed his hand on it he felt again that its formless bulk was warmed all through by the mild late sunshine. He went on with his story:—"They always told us boys quizzically that this was because my father's voice was a good barytone. If he hadn't been a singer, they told us, or worse than that, if he'd had one of those odious thin tenors . . . ! Bantering and laughing and making music, that's all we boys ever heard our elders doing. They were fine musicians, the three of them. They all sang, Father played the 'cello and Mother the violin. Aunt Lavinia was a professional pianist—you should have heard her play before the arthritis stiffened her fingers. My brother and I, when we were little boys, hardly ever went to sleep except to the distant sound of their music."

"It sounds lovely," said the girl, her eyes bent on the valley spread far below them in grayed blues and mauves and fawn-browns.

"It was too lovely to last."

After a silence, "Where did you live?" she murmured.

"Oh, all around New York. In what used to be suburbs. Father liked changing around, and Mother liked whatever he liked. Aunt Lavinia had a music studio in the city, where she gave her lessons, so it didn't make any difference to her where she lived, so long as 'little Margaret' was there. Margaret was my mother. She was somewhat younger than Lavinia. Two or three times we went back to England for the summer. We moved all the time. Downer and I expected to be in a new public school every September. We never had the same playmates more than a year, but we didn't care. We were like Aunt Lavinia. We all were. As long as Margaret was there . . ."

He looked back incredulously. "We were really very happy."

"What was your father's work?"

"He had a position in a publishing house. He had gone straight from Oxford to a firm of publishers in London. And after a while their American branch offered him a better position in New York."

He had come to the end of what could be told lounging on this warm rock, in tepid sunshine. What was now to be said stood up threateningly before him, and his muscles, tightening, brought him to his feet to face it.

"Yes, I suppose we'd better go on," said Susan.

LEANING against the steepness of the field, they began climbing again, and soon, as if to keep up with the nervous haste of the narrator, climbing rapidly. "My little brother Downer was—how old was he?—10—before we were wakened up from our good dream." He reflected, and said dryly, "Aunt Lavinia fell in love then and married and went away with her husband to Australia. She had always said she could not live without her little sister. Yet she left her to go to the other side of the globe. She was 37 years old and although she was a lovely creature, she had never cared for any man before. Perhaps that was it."

"What kind of man?" asked Susan, her breath coming quickly with the swiftness of their pace.

"I couldn't tell you what kind of a man. I never knew much about him. I was only 13 years old then. All I knew was that Father and Mother couldn't endure him. They thought Aunt Lavinia had lost her head. She was mad about him." In the same harsh voice he now said rapidly, "And six or seven months after that, my mother had pneumonia and died."

On a sharply indrawn breath Susan stopped short to look at him. No, not at him. When she spoke he saw that she was looking far beyond him, at a little boy standing beside a grave. "When you were only 14 years old!" she said slowly, her young, young voice rich—as he had thought the voice of ignorant youth could never be—with compassion. He stood still, bending his head to catch the last echoes of an intonation he was never to forget. After 30 years, the little boy standing by his mother's grave felt the strangling knot of his misery loosen.

With an appeased sigh he turned to climb again, slowly now, plodding step by step as the dark words dropped, one by one. "And then my father went to pieces. Loneliness. Heartbreak. Weakness most of all, probably. He took to drinking. He let his work go. He quarreled with everyone. Nobody came to see us any more. In less than a year he lost his position. After that we lived on what he could sell of our things. His books, most of them, all that anybody would buy. Mother's things. Her violin. His 'cello. By the end of my senior year in high school—I was just 15 then . . ." Something in Susan's face made him say now, quickly, "You are not to think that he was ever rough to us. My father was always perfectly well-mannered to everyone, even to people he quarreled with. Sometimes he tried to be kind to his sons. Once in a while, when he was sober, he would try to talk to us, ask us what we were studying. But he never listened to the answers. Downer and I knew he was thinking all the time how much better it would have been if we had died instead of Mother. I didn't blame him at all. I thought so too. I missed Mother as much as he did." He was astounded at what he was saying. His voice roughened, broke. "Why do I bring up all this old misery? Let it go! Let it go!"

Her eyes, dark, very attentive, were almost black with emotion. She shook her head in a peremptory gesture. "Oh, you can't stop now!" she cried. "I can't bear to hear it. But I can't bear not to hear it. What happened? What happened to you then?"

THEY HAD come now to the fringe of trees at the top of the field and halted. "Nothing happened till the week after I had graduated from high school—I didn't know what to do all that time except to keep on going to school and making Downer go. And then one morning when I got up, I found Father lying at the foot of the stairs. He wasn't unconscious, but he didn't know me. He never knew me again. His back was broken. He had caught his foot in the stair carpet. It was in rags. Everything was in rags. He died in the hospital the next day."

"Oh! What did you do?" cried the girl.

"You're shivering. Let me put your jacket on. Shouldn't we turn back?"

"It's not the cold. What did you do?"

"I got a job. I had to take care of Downer. He had to be put through high school. I knew Mother would want that."

"What kind of a job? A boy of 15!"

"Boys' jobs. One after another. Sweeping out a grocery store. Selling neckties in a cheap haberdashery. Delivering packages for a butcher."

"How did you live?"

"In a hall-bedroom. We found one with a double bed. We cooked on the gas-jet. You don't know what cooking on a gas-jet in a bedroom means. Well, I didn't do it well. I did everything badly. We lived like pigs who never have quite enough to eat. We didn't know how to take care of ourselves, or our clothes, how to get the right food. Downer was sick a good deal—sore throats. I didn't know how to take care of a sick child. And I had to leave him alone of course, when I went out to work. The poor kid! He'd try to be brave about it, but when the time came for me to go, he'd hold on to my hand as long as he could. We'd been spoiled, you see. We'd always had two mothers."

"Didn't you have any folks in England to help you?"

"If I'd asked them for help they'd have found out about Father's going to pieces. And I knew Mother wouldn't want that. I didn't know who the English kin were either, not very well. Boys never pay attention to family relations. They were only cousins, anyhow. Of course I should have asked them. I see that now."

"But why didn't you tell Aunt Lavinia?"

"And what would have been the good of telling her? I knew she couldn't do anything but worry. Since her marriage her husband had lost his money. From her letters to Father I knew that they lived poorly on the little he could make out of what he had left, a small business in Melbourne. And she wasn't allowed to earn anything herself. Her husband had made her promise when they were married that she would give up her profession. That was one of the things my parents had against him, that he was the kind of man whose vanity could not bear to have his wife in any way independent of him.
